winds all spring; I like the place, and I believe the climate is healthy to all Pennsylvania people. Farming in Illinois is only fun for our eastern boys, to what it is in Pennsylvania on those high hills; no stopes to pick; it is a surprise to an eastern man if he can jump in one of these gang plows, and plow for a whole week and not strike one stone; that is something I was never used to. It is very strange to me, that I can't see any mountains, all levels; as far as I see around. I can see lots of timber, but there is onwone kind here that I have seen yet, that we have in Pennsylvania, and that is willow; of course they have apple trees too; they don't farm any wheat, nothing but soft grain; they mainly lean on stock; it is nothing for a man to have 150 or 250 hogs, from 40 to 50 steers, and from 10 to 25 cows. The average farms are 240 acres, but they run from 120, to 400 acies, two men handle a farm of 160 acres and not work over hours a day on the farm; there is more or less a high wind all the time, the reason I suppose is, because they are nearer to the north pole. There is also a great difference in these western people's living to what the people live in Pennsylvania; especially of what we call Penn's valley; I presume that valley can not be headed off over the whole world; certainly you get plenty to eat, only differently prepared; it makes a change openly and in bodily mind, but prosperity has stricken this part of Illinois by all appearance; there is lots of money to be made here, if you have genious enough to get up before breakfast, but about all the machinery that is used here, is different from that of Pennsylvania, a fellow has to gradnate of a different course here, before he can go ahead, but I presume if these people should go to Pennsylvania and start up farming there, they would have to take a college graduate, and couldn't plow then in those stoney hills. Yours Respectfully WILLARD JAMISON.

-Last fall town council decided to pat down a concrete walk from High street to the C. R. R. of Pa. depot along Spring creek. If the concrete walks that were put down last season in other parts of own are carefully examined, since enaring the winter, there might be some ference of opinion. It is a question hether that kind of a walk would last very long, owing to the moisture and the settling of the ground along the wall. Good idea to go slow on the proposition, if it is not too late.

Bellefonte on February 22, 1836. The subject of this sketch received a common school education, and in 1853 became a clerk in a general mercantile store at Bellefonte, going to Philadelphia two years later, where he remained in the employ of Pomery, Lincoln & Company until 1857, when he came to Tyrone, and had been a resident here ever since. Here he engaged in a general mercantile and lumber business in partnership with Jacob Burley. The partnership was dissolved in 1868, after which Mr Pruner engaged in looking after his real estate, western land and railroad intersuccess, which was due to his own energy and business qualifications. At the organization of the Farmers and Merchants National bank in November 1902, he was elected president of the institution and remained in the place until the present time. He was one of the original stockholders in the Northern Pacific tailroad. He was also interested railroads. He was a large owner of Pennsylvania railroad stock and other interests.
