SOCIOLOGICAL

A New Red Cross Leader.

Miss Clara Barton resigned the presidency of the American Red Cross soclety, May 14, and Mrs. John A. Logan, vice president of the society, became its acting president. Miss Barton explains that she is weary of the work and is forced by her age to give it up. No reference was made to the existing split over her management, and it was presumed that the breach would be healed by her retirement. Miss Barton had been absolute master of the soci ety for twenty-three years, being ap pointed by President Garfield.

A New Social Profession.

"The social secretary" as a new profession in the social service was the main subject of discussion before the American Institute of Social Service at New York, May 16. This position in big stores is designed to affect the lives of women practically, no matter how many hours of the day they may work out. The social secretary is to tell the shopgiris what to wear, how to dress and how to keep themselves
