Rockefeller Controversy Shakes Church

Honesty and expediency have locked arms in mortal combat over the Rockefeller gift to the Congregational foreign missions.

In a supplementary statement issued by the protesting committee of ministers opposing acceptance of Rockefeller money it is explained that the point which vitiates the whole proceeding is the voluntary relation of the mission board to the donor, but that with an unknown and unimpeached giver the church is brought into no such conscious and deliberate relation. They admit that money is impersonal and cannot of itseif have any moral taint.

The defense of Rockefeller methods made in the public press by H. H. Rogers, vice president of the Standard Oll company-namely, that rebates on railroads were formerly legal just as slavery was formerly legal-was met promptly by Dr. Washington Gladden, moderator of the council of the Congregational churches, who questions the truth of Mr. Rogers' statement that no rebates have been granted to the oil trust since the passage of the interstate commerce law. He admits, however, that the trust has now gained such a power in the classification and control of freight rates as to make the use of rebates unnecessary.

Incidentally Dr. Gladden preached his last Sunday's sermon at Columbus, O., on "The Christian of Today," insisting that the Christian is beginning to get a new idea of what it means to carry his religion into his business.

That John D. Rockefeller has not been indifferent to the storm of criticism in press and pulpit is indicated by the issuance to the press of an extended reply to Dr. Gladden and others signed by S. C. T. Dodd, general solicitor of the Standard Oil company. Mr. Dodd says that the charge that Mr. Rockefeller made his money dishonestly is doubly vile because made by ministers in the pretended interest of morality. He asserts, further, that the Standard Oil company does not own a share of stock of a railroad company, does not control any railroad and since the enactment of the interstate commerce law has not received lower rates than other shippers by rebates or any other devices. He denies that Mr. Rockefeller has had any connection directly or indirectly with gas or copper enterprises.
