

OCTAGON PUZZLE.

A Toy With Which to Amuse Yourself and Your Playmates.

Here is an ingenious little puzzle, the apparatus of which you can make yourself, which you will find quite amusing and not a little difficult until you have mastered the trick of properly placing the pieces together. Try it on your playmates who do not know how to build the octagon and see how it will worry them.

Cut from a piece of stiff cardboard four of each of the three designs A, B, C.

HOW TO MAKE THE PUZZLE.

C (Fig. 1), as shown in the accompanying drawing. This operation will give you twelve pieces. The problem is to assemble them together in such a way that they will form an octagon—the pieces lettered A to be fitted together in the center, the pieces B and C to be fitted together alternately around the pieces lettered A after the A pieces have been fitted together.

See if you can solve this interesting geometrical puzzle before you examine the solution (Fig. 2).—New York Mail.

HELEN'S VERSE.

What She Recited on Her First Visit to Sunday School.

It was Helen's first visit to the Sunday school. She was placed in the infant class and kept very close watch of everything that was done. It pleased her to see the little ones all around her taking part in the exercises, and she felt a little neglected at not being asked to help.

Toward the close of school the superintendent asked for Bible verses. One after another boys and girls rose and recited beautiful texts. Then there was a pause, and the superintendent, looking over toward the infant class, asked if any of the small people would recite a verse.

This was Helen's chance. Jumping up quickly, she said, in a clear voice, such as mamma had taught her to use when speaking pieces:

"Jack Sprat could eat no fat, His wife could eat no lean; Betwixt them both they cleared the plate And licked the platter clean."

Helen's older sister felt very much ashamed, and every one else was ready to smile, but the superintendent, who knew Helen had done her best, looked very much pleased as he said:

"That was very well recited, and the verse contains a good lesson. Jack and his wife did not like the same kind of meat, yet they got on very well together and wasted nothing."

Helen was delighted, and on the following Sunday had a real Bible verse to recite.

A Brave Hunter.

An officer who was out shooting in India was waiting at the mouth of a gully which was being beaten for a tiger. The tiger jumped from the jungle into a clear space about forty yards in front of him. He fired and missed. The tiger made a leap toward him and landed. He fired again, and the brute fell over killed. His friends, who were amazed at his first miss, understood when they saw him drop his gun instantly upon firing the second shot and seize a snake which had coiled over his arm. He had it by the neck and struck its head off with his knife. It was a cobra, the deadliest of the Hindustan reptiles. As he had raised his gun to fire the first shot he had felt it around his leg, and he had to choose between tiger and cobra, but killed both.

Conundrums.

Why is a street car like raspberries? Because both get jammed.

When is a prisoner like a leaky boat? When being bailed out.

What kind of a horse has too many legs and yet never walks? The clothes-horse.

A Certain Boy.

He doesn't like to go to bed. And getting up is worse. To washing, too, I've heard it said. He's just as much adverse.

And for school and studying When he would rather roam, He hates it more than anything But doing work at home.

I must admit that it is true, Though 'tis a sorry boast. Whatever he is told to do, Is what he hates the most.

I do suppose that if he chose What he should do all day, He'd play and eat and sleep, and then He'd eat and sleep and play.

A FUNNY SHADOW.

You Can Make It Roll Its Eyes and Move Its Mouth.

Here is a way for a bright boy to make lots of fun for the family or a company of friends:

Hang a good sized looking glass on the wall in one corner of the room and, having lowered the gas, let some one hold a candle in such a way that the light from it will be reflected from the looking glass on to the adjoining wall. This reflected light will be a parallelogram in form, and if you now step in front of the candle, but not in front of the glass, the shadow of your head will appear in the center of the parallelogram of light.

But your shadow, while it has the proper outline of your head, will be merely a dark spot, without any sign of life. What you have to do is to give it eyes, nose and mouth, and this you can do with very little trouble.

Having made the experiment just described to see that you understand exactly how the candle should be held to get your shadow in the right place, get a sheet of thick paper and cut in it two eyes, a nose and a mouth, all of a grotesque appearance, and then paste the paper on the looking glass so that the features will be in the center.

Now take your position as before, and if the candle be properly held the light from the eyes, nose and mouth will be reflected on your shadow exactly as if those features belonged to your head, with an effect that is both startling and amusing.

But you can make an even better effect than that if you will prepare two sheets of paper with eyes, nose and mouth in them, the sheets to be exact duplicates of each other. Fix one of these to the glass and the other exactly over it, but the latter must be fastened at only one place at the top, so that it may be swung gently from side to side.

Now get some one to sway this upper paper to and fro just a little way, and that will make the eyes in the shadow snap and the mouth move as if it really had life.—Exchange.

THE CUNNING JESTER.

How He Got Back in the Good Graces of the Duke.

The Duke of Brunswick's jester offended him one day, and the duke promptly ordered the unlucky funny man to leave his domain forever. "If you ever come back on my soil," roared the duke, "I'll have you hanged on the highest tower of my palace!" The poor jester ran for his life and remained for some time in the neighboring country, but at last he got homesick. So, after thinking for awhile, he went to a peasant and said, "How much do you want to take a wheelbarrow load of earth across the border to Brunswick?" The peasant agreed to do it for $1, and when the wheelbarrow was loaded he jumped on it and sat down on the earth.

Thus he entered Brunswick and waited, seated in his barrow, till the duke came riding along the street.

"Didn't I tell you that you should be hanged if you were ever caught on my soil again?"

"Oh," said the jester, "you're wrong for once. This isn't your soil. It comes from the county alongside of yours."

The duke scratched his head and thought for awhile. Then he laughed and said: "Well, I guess you're too smart a man to hang. You may stay here."

Japanese Statues.

In a temple in Japan there are three bronze monkeys. The first, with paws over his eyes, is supposed to see nothing evil; the second, with paws over his mouth, is supposed to say nothing evil, and the third, with paws over his ears, is supposed to hear nothing evil. Could all you children be protected like these famous monkeys the demon ill temper that, entering your hearts, brings forth harsh words and actions would fold his wings and disappear.

Epilepsy

can be cured. The discovery that it is purely a nervous disorder has led to the application of the great nerve restorer,

Dr. Miles'

Restorative Nervine with the happy result that thousands have been completely cured, and others are being cured every day.

"In the year '92 I was stricken with epilepsy. Doctors treated me for several years, but I grew worse. I would have such awful fits. I cannot tell my awful sufferings. A druggist recommended Dr. Miles' Nervine, and I bought a bottle, and found it helped me, and I took three more and am cured. I had only one light spell after I commenced taking it. I do hope the time will come when everybody will know that your medicine cures these awful fits."

JOHN LEWIS, Clarion, Pa.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is sold under a guarantee that your druggist will refund your money if first bottle does not benefit.
