

An Animal Story For Little Folks

Mr. Bear Is Duped

On a very warm spring day, when the woods were more attractive than the dusty highroad, Mr. Fox and Mr. Bear, who at that time were great chums, set out to pay a call on the barnyard dog. They had dressed themselves in their best Sunday clothes, for Miss Barnyard Dog was a great belle at that time and also knew the way into the hen yard and had been known to treat her friends to many chicken dinners. As they trudged along both began to grow very hot and dusty, and the fine clothes they wore did not help to make them more comfortable. Mr. Fox began to wonder how he could get rid of that heavy coat of his, for it made him weary to carry it.

"I have it," he whispered to himself. "Make old man Bear carry it for me."

"I say!" he said to Mr. Bear. "Bet you a ham bone I can run to the stump in the woods over by the pond, back of Farmer Brown's, in five minutes."

"Taken," said Mr. Bear. "You can't do it."

"Carry my coat and I'll show you," cried Mr. Fox.

Mr. Bear meekly took the coat and Mr. Fox was off on the jump. He ran through the meadow past the hill, down the valley into the wood, jumped into the pond and had a good cool bath, smoothed out his hair nicely, put on his clothes, and then, setting himself on the stump near the cool trees, he waited for Mr. Bear.

"Rather warm," remarked Mr. Fox. "You seem weary."

"Tired to death," jerked Mr. Bear crossly, "but I won the ham bone."

"Excuse me, Brother Bear," said Mr. Fox cunningly, taking his coat and starting for Miss Dog's; "it's no race. You forgot to take the time of starting," and, with a wink, he was off.

The Disobedient Mice

Two contrary little mice, in disobedience to their parents' orders, left their home one day for a stroll through the world. They had not gone far when they came across a plate of nice cool milk.

"Ah!" cried Tommy Mouse, "isn't this fine? I told you we knew more about the world than our parents. See what we have found!"

"Yes," replied Jimmy Mouse, "if we had listened to our parents we would have stayed at home and gone hungry."

Then they both fell to drinking the milk and drank and drank until they

"IT WOULD BE A SHAME TO LEAVE IT," could hardly drink any more. And yet there still remained half of the milk in the plate.

"You had better trot along home," said Mr. Rat, who passed just then. "I see the cats coming this way."

"No, it would be a shame to run away and leave all this nice milk," said Jimmy. "I guess he doesn't know any better than our parents."

"I don't believe he does," said Tommy.

So they kept on drinking until they rolled over exhausted.

And just then two large gray cats came in the door.

"Let's run," said Jimmy in a weak voice.

"I'm so full I can't move," replied Tommy feebly.

"So am I," added Jimmy, with a sigh.

And those were the last words of the poor little disobedient mice.—Atlanta Constitution.

American Trade in China.

In a recent letter from Amoy, China, United States Consul George E. Anderson seeks to explode some current notions about the present status of American trade among the Celestials. He says that our manufacturers must enter China aggressively, with a determination to stay there indefinitely. It is not worth while, he thinks, to work for present trade without regard to the future. The policy of the men who have built up the foreign trade in China has been to work for the future. Men who are doing the most trade in China at the present time have for years devoted a certain portion of their annual earnings to the extension of trade.

Consul Anderson states that many American business men seem to think that the United States already has the bulk of the foreign trade of China, whereas statistics show that this country has about 10 per cent, while Great Britain has about 60 per cent. The American trade passing through the hands of foreigners is also about 10 per cent, so that this country really enjoys about 20 per cent of the foreign trade with China. The British themselves have been forced to take up American lines of goods in order to hold their own trade. Great Britain's persistence in working for Chinese trade is compared to that of America by Consul Anderson as follows:

Having been the first of the great powers to give attention to Chinese trade, Great Britain has never ceased to work for it and protect it when once secured during all the years since the beginning was first made. On the other hand, the United States has really given the subject of trade with China very little attention and is today giving it comparatively little attention. The number of concerns in America interested in trade with China, as compared with the whole of American interests, is infinitesimal. The American producer has worked for his home market, next for the European market, a little in a half hearted way for a South American market and even for a market in Africa, with little regard for the immense possibilities of trade in the east, for which America is the most favorably situated of all western nations. When once eastern trade has been considered, the average American producer has regarded it as something which will be American anyway because of this favorable relation of the United States to the orient. This mistaken notion is passing away, and a beginning of an aggressive campaign for American trade in China has been made, but as yet it is really in the beginning. While shipments of American goods to China show a great increase, the increase is really more with the east as a whole rather than with China. As yet American trade is nothing compared with what it ought to be, considered from an international economic standpoint. The United States has the means to dominate the trade of the east if it will properly employ them.

The consul adds that if Americans expect to secure trade in China where foreign trade is already established they must be prepared to meet competitors on their own ground and be prepared to lose money for several years if necessary. Lack of territorial concessions or "spheres of influence," where concessions mean prestige and trade advantage, Consul Anderson says, is a serious drawback to Americans who wish to compete with other nations in China.

Arbitration and Dignity.

The second case to be submitted to The Hague court was recently decided after three years of consideration. The question in dispute was the interpretation of the language of treaties made by Japan with England, France and Germany about taxes on leased land. Japan lost her case, which was of no great importance, but the decision helps to fix the habit of arbitration.

Success in arbitration is not encouraging as a means of securing peace between nations where great issues are involved. In the first place, all questions touching the honor of a nation are expressly excepted from the scope of The Hague court. It rests with the nation which raises objection to arbitration to determine whether the matter proposed for consideration by the court affects its honor. In the dispute between Russia and Japan, Russia has claimed that the demands of her enemy could not be granted without loss of honor. From that point of view there was nothing to arbitrate. If she could waive her points of honor and submit the case to arbitration she might just as well waive them in the first place and negotiate with Japan direct.

If Alice Roosevelt ever gets busy with the pen like her versatile father she may one day delight the world with a modern "Alice in Wonderland" as the sequel to her visit to the mysterious dowager empress of China.

German capitalists recently put up more money for a railway in Brazil. Evidently they count on the Kaiser's "mailed fist" to see them through if some future Castro tries to hold them up.

After all the fuss it turns out that Chicago can give the cities of Scotland, including Glasgow, points on cheap street railway fares, long rides and general quality of service.

A Columbia-Berlin Alliance.

An educational alliance between Columbia university and the University of Berlin is contemplated in the gift of $50,000 by James Speyer of New York to establish the Theodore Roosevelt professorship of American history and institutions in the great German university. It is understood that as the result of an agreement reached by President Butler of Columbia and Emperor William last summer the German government will establish at Columbia university a professorship of German history and institutions. Incumbents of the Roosevelt professorship will be appointed by the Prussian minister of education with the emperor's sanction after being nominated by the trustees of Columbia university. Each will hold office for one year and will give instruction in the German language. The trustees have nominated for the first holder of the chair John William Burgess, professor of political science and constitutional law at Columbia.

Eye Photo Proves Murder.

Professor Martini of the University of Rome recently brought to justice a murderer named Casale at Perouse by discovering in one of his eyes the profile of the victim. This he photographed through his ophthalmoscope. Upon seeing it the murderer confessed, saying that ever since he had committed the deed he had seen constantly the face of his victim as a phantom. The face on the retina continued to be visible for fifty-two hours, after which it faded away.

Earthquake Admits Pacific.

All attempts to stem the rising tide of water in the new Salton sea, which skirts the main lines of the Southern Pacific for nearly 100 miles, stretching away to the foothills on either side for twenty-five miles, have now ceased, after ten months' of effort and the expenditure of $100,000. It is generally believed that the earthquake shocks of last May and June opened subterranean fissures under the divide between the old Salton basin and the gulf of California, thus forcing the new Salton sea to ocean level. A half inch daily rise for three months is expected to completely fill the old basin, and settlers are preparing for the inevitable.

A New Sort of Flying Machine.

What the Scientific American regards as "a considerable step in advance" in aerial navigation is an experimental aeroplane actually able to lift itself into the air from a position of rest which has recently been constructed in Paris for Henri and Armand Dugaux, two young engineers of Geneva, Switzerland. The machine is operated by propellers driven by a gasoline motor and will carry a dead weight of fifteen and one-half pounds besides its own weight, which is thirty-eight and one-half pounds. The motor is made as light as possible, the valves, rods, shafts, etc., being hollow. It weighs only a little over ten pounds, including the gasoline tank, fly wheel and all the working parts. It has an output of three and one-tenth horsepower. This machine is designed to serve as the lifting power of a complete airship.

Prince and Horse Show Week.

Between the lavish entertainment of Admiral-Prince Louis of Battenberg and the attendance on the annual horse show at the Garden, New York society cut an unusually smart figure at the opening of the season. The admiral-prince and the president's daughter both attended the horse show, and a ball was given on the deck of the British flag-ship. The men of the British and American ships fraternized at a big Coney Island banquet.
