Ivan Ilitch Petrunkevich, Who May Head Russian Douma.

The Russian douma, which is soon to assemble, is the first body of the nature of a parliament to come into existence in the empire of the czar. Ivan Ilitch Petrunkevich has been selected by the Constitutional Democrats as their candidate for president of the douma. On account of the large mafority in the body which they will possess his choice is considered certain.

From his early manhood he has fought for the principles of liberalism

Indeed, he was so pro- lin. Though he was recalled and honnounced in his liberal opinions that the ored with the post of minister of forgovernment at St. Petersburg caused eign affairs at Tokyo, he afterward him to be exiled, but he later obtained an estate in the province of Tver, where he became a zemstvo leader. When the Emperor Nicholas II, came to the throne all the zemstvos sent addresses of felicitation to the young monarch, that of Tver among the rest. but the latter in felicitating the new ruler added that for the welfare of Russia he should give a constitution to his people. In 1896 the nobles and zemstvoists who had sent addresses were presented to the emperor, and Petrunkevich, who had been the principal author of the address of the Tver zemstvo, headed the delegation from his province. The czar read a speech prepared for him by Pobedonostzeff. then procurator of the holy synod, and in it thanked the zemstvos for their
