

ARCHBISHOP FARLEY.

New York Prelate Who May Receive a Red Hat. Archbishop John M. Farley of New York, who recently visited Pope Pius X. and who, as some think, is likely soon to receive a cardinal's hat, succeeded the late Archbishop Corrigan as head of the archdiocese of New York. He is the fourth to occupy that high station among the clergy of the Roman Catholic church in America. He was born in Ireland in 1842 and, coming to this country as a youth, pursued his studies at St. John's college, Fordham, and St. Joseph's seminary, Troy. After an advanced course in the American college at Rome he was ordained in that city in 1870. He was for twelve years private secretary to the late Archbishop McCloskey. He held various posts of honor and in 1895 was consecrated titular bishop of Zeugma, acting as assistant to the archbishop of New York. It was during this period that he wrote an article on a theological question for a review. The bishop accepted the very liberal compensation of the magazine for the article. A literary man who had read it spoke of it to a member of the bishop's household.

"It is a splendid argument," said the man. "It is sure to bear fruit." "It has borne fruit," said the clergyman. "It has bought breeches and shoes for a lot of youngsters who couldn't go to school in their rags." Mr. Farley has been head of the archdiocese of New York since 1902.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR.

Characteristics of the Heir to a Standard Oil Fortune.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., whose wife not long ago presented him with a son, has named the boy John D. Rockefeller 3d, and he is said to feel much gratified that there is now an heir to the paternal name as well as the paternal fortune. Mr. Rockefeller was born in 1877 and married Miss Abby G. Aldrich, daughter of Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island, in 1901, thereby uniting two families powerful in the world of industry and finance. His health recently has not been equal to the demands of a strenuous life, and for that reason he has not taken the active part in the corporations with which his father is connected that was expected.

Mr. Rockefeller once told a story of a tour he took in the south. "I attended church one Sunday morning," said he, "in a quaint little wooden meeting house where the pews were of unpainted pine boards. The minister was a good man, a sincere man, a really eloquent man, but he had an unfortunate habit of bellowing. He bellowed like a bull. His voice shook the rafters. The sound overwhelmed the senses, and it was often impossible for very noise to get at the man's meaning. He was especially loud during the prayer. I never heard such an uproar as filled the little building while this southern minister prayed. After he was through a little girl on my left gave a sigh of relief and I heard her whisper to her father: "Father, don't you think if he lived nearer to God he wouldn't have to talk so loud?"

QUEEN VICTORIA'S CROWN.

The Bride of King Alfonso and Her Gifts.

When Princess Victoria Eugenie became Queen Victoria of Spain by her marriage to King Alfonso she received enough presents to fill a museum. The presents from the king himself were worth a large fortune. One of them was the crown of the queens of Spain, which had rested on many fair royal heads before hers. Among Alfonso's presents were several unique pieces of jewelry. One of these was a brooch made in the form of the king's favorite motor car and set in diamonds. The top of the touneau was in rubies, and the door of the car, on being opened, revealed a portrait of Alfonso.

Senator Knute Nelson of Minnesota sold papers as a boy, and when a bill came up in the senate recently to compel newsboys in the District of Columbia to take out licenses he came to their defense at once. He said he knew what it was to sell papers, and it wasn't fair to ask a little newsboy to procure a license before he could do business. Senator Nelson was born in Norway and came to this country with his mother at five years of age. He enlisted in the Union army a month after Fort Sumter was fired on. After he became senator he attended a dinner at Baltimore and recalled in happy fashion how during the civil war he marched through the city as a private soldier, falling in a humorous fashion how he captured a horse not far from Baltimore. These experiences furnished much amusement, but a couple of days after Mr. Nelson returned to Washington he was given an opportunity to see the other side of the medal. The man who owned the horse wrote, demanding payment for the property which had been appropriated so many years ago. The letter gave details which convinced Senator Nelson that the writer was indeed owner of the captured animal.

FURNITURE.

What You Should Do to Keep It in Good Condition.

Furniture, to be preserved in good condition, should be polished once a week. If this care is given it, and with ordinary good usage, it will not need to go to the repair shop for many years.

To counteract the ill effects of steam heat, which cracks and warps all the lighter kinds of furniture, the wood should be rubbed regularly with a flannel dipped in equal parts of linseed oil and turpentine and afterward dried with a soft cloth.

Much of the bamboo furniture is improved by washing with cold water and soap. The wicker furniture of the un-stained variety should be regularly scrubbed with the brush. And if kept clean in this way it will maintain its state of beauty and usefulness much longer.

The mahogany table with the ordinary stains can be cleaned with tepid water and soap on a soft cloth. After washing, the table should be thoroughly dried and then rubbed with a clean flannel and a little linseed oil or crude petroleum. Only a few drops of the oil should be used at a time, and they should be thoroughly rubbed in until the surface shines without a suspicion of greasiness.

If a piece of furniture has not been polished for a long time it will take several applications at intervals of a few days to make the wood glossy and smooth, but the labor is amply rewarded finally by the well cared for and highly polished finish it acquires.

Rosewood and black walnut should be treated in the same way as mahogany—that is, rubbed with linseed oil or crude petroleum. But the preliminary washing applies only to the mahogany.

Black oak, unless very frequently dusted and rubbed with oil, presents a disagreeably grimy aspect.

The oil in this case should be rubbed off, and not a particle allowed to remain, as it will simply act as a dust collector. When a wood is very highly varnished it should be washed with tea water—that is to say, water in which tea has been steeped for half an hour. This water will not impair the gloss as does ordinary soap and water.

If the linseed oil is not successful in creating a polish, a wineglass of olive oil, the same quantity of vinegar and two tablespoonfuls of alcohol, shaken together and thoroughly mixed, make a good varnish. This dressing is applied with a soft cloth, and the surface of the wood must be polished with a piece of flannel until thoroughly dry and glossy.—New York World.

A Broad Hint.

A Big Gorge.

Mrs. Newrich (back from the honeymoon in Switzerland)—Do you remember, dear, that lovely gorge up in the mountains? Mr. Newrich—I do. It was the squarrest meal I ever ate.

Triumphant Cigar Selling!

The success given to the National Cigar Stands in this and more than 2,000 other towns was only to be expected. Here are cigars of proved merit and proved condition, selling for than was ever asked for equal quality in the history of the cigar business. Success was certain.

It isn't a "bargain occasion." It isn't a fad. It isn't a spasmodic effort. It's the natural result of a common-sense, fundamental, merchandising principle.

Two thousand stores buy as one. Their cigars are produced in million lots and each store gets its share straight from the producer. No intermediate profits, no jobber's "rake-off," no rents, no selling expenses to speak of! And all the saving given to the smoker!

We have already told how this plan gives you 3 for 25c. cigars for 5c. Now take

LA IDALIA

Panetelas—10c.

La Idalia is one of the best clear Havana cigars produced in the United States. Nothing is used in it but selected, Cuban-grown leaf, fully ripened; sweet, rich and aromatic. There are 12 sizes, each selling at the price usually asked for the next larger size. Besides that, each size weighs two pounds to the thousand more than the usual weight of the same shape.

La Idalia is only one of the many exclusive brands, produced and sold exclusively by the National Cigar Stands Co., each showing the same tremendous saving in price-for-quality.
