Opening of the Grand Opera Season In America-Two Rival Organizations In the Field-Lina Cavalieri and Caruso - Grand Opera's Beginning In the New World Je

RAND opera in M American nevr reached such high tide as it enjoys at present. Throughout the United States an increased interest in this highest form of the musical drama is noted, and the city of New York is now the world's CARICATURE OF EN-capital of opera. RICO CARUSO. For the first time two houses are opening for simultaneous presentation of rival operatic organizations which embrace the highest talent to be gathered from both the old world and the new. The greatest singers of Europe, at princely salaries, have been brought over by Messrs. Conried and Hammerstein, each vying with the other to obtain the most brilliant artists the world can furnish. We have native talent that ranks high on the operatic stage-a great deal of it, to be accurate. One American singer who makes her first operatic appearance in this country the present season is Miss Geraldine Farrar, of whom the German crown prince was at one time enamored. She is still quite young and has won great triumphs abroad.

Another of the famous singers new to America is Lina Cavalleri, called "the most beautiful woman in Europe." Miss Cavalleri has had a wonderful career. She is an Italian, born in Rome, and was left an orphan at sixteen. For three years she supported herself by making pantaloons in a tailer shop. While here her unusual beauty attracted the attention of an army officer, a young Italian prince. There was a brief love affair. The prince's family intervened and tore the lovers apart. The girl began to sing in a music ball, where she was successful because of her beauty. She then went to Paris and sang in a cafe chantant. Determining to become a prima donna, she saved money from her pay and took a severe course of training under the best teachers. Then she reappeared in Rome and made a brilliant triumph in grand opera. She returned to France and on the operatic stage startled and delighted those who had heard her uncultivated voice and admired her beauty in the cafe chantant. The old world was at her foot. Poets and artists raved. Even Sarah Bernhardt declared her to be the most beautiful woman in Paris. King Edward of England, whose voice in these matters is potent, placed her second in all Europe, but Queen Alexandra declared her to be first in beauty. Miss Cavalieri has acquired a large fortune

Mr. Hammerstein brings to his Manhattan Opera House a tenor new to this country, Alessandro Bonci. Like Lina Cavalleri, he was poor in his youth and had a severe struggle. His father was a laborer, and the boy made his first money by singing in a church on feast days. When he was eighteen he walked to Pesare to have his voice examined and was accepted as a pupil in the Rossini conservatory there. For twelve years he traveled with unimportant troupes. During the past five years he has sung in many European countries with distinguished success, dividing honors with Enrico Caruso as one of the greatest Italian tenors.

Caruso is a member of Heinrich Conried's Metropolitan Opera company and has appeared in New York for several seasons past. He has recently won some unenvisible notoriety by reason of his arrest and trial on a charge of an noying a woman at the zoological gardens in Central park. press and pulpit. The agitation for their suppression resulted in orders being issued depriving them of licenses, but they were permitted to open again. Mayor Schmitz was first chosen executive of San Francisco in 1901 as the candidate of the labor unions and is serving his third term. He has been known from the Atlantic to the Pacific as the "labor mayor." His mother was born in County Clare and his father, Joseph Schmitz, in Germany. The latter was one of the argonauts of '49, and the present mayor was born in the city by the Golden Gate in 1864.

The elder Schmitz had musical abilities and trained his son in the direction of a musical career, but the boy wanted to become a physician. He began the study of medicine, but his health failed, and then he took up amateur athletics. It was in this way he got the magnificent physique which makes him now an impressive figure.

He turned again to music and was a drummer and afterward a violinist in a San Francisco orchestra. He became director of the orchestra and president of the musicians' union, and, though in time be embarked in the making of professor in the Gregorian university, gas engines and got more money from this than from drawing the bow or wielding the director's baton, he always remained prominent as a labor union man and so was chosen as the standard bearer when the labor forces put a ticket in the field against those of both the old parties in 1901. Schmitz was then called the "addler candidate," and D. L. Delmas, the lawyer who was recently retained for the dewhere he is recognized as a leading flames some months ago. The question
