Fight Against Child Slavery.

THE child labor problem has been brought to the front in America recently by the discussion in the senate on the subject, by the strong recommendations of Governor Charles E. Hughes in his first message to the legislature of New York and by President Roosevelt's let-

A. J. BEVERIDGE. ter to the Consumers' league of New York regarding the evils incident to the employment of those of tender years in industrial establishments.

The bill introduced in the senate by Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana has been much discussed in the press, and the question of the wisdom of national legislation on the subject has been raised. Some claim that it is a problem whose solution can best be left entirely to the individual states. Senator Beveridge challenged attention by his statement that there are now nearly 2,000,000 breadwinners under fifteen years of age in the United States and that of these almost 700,000 are engaged in work other than agriculture. "Child labor on the farm is good," says the senator. "This bill does not strike at that. It strikes only at child slavery in factories, mines and sweatshops."

Senator Beveridge's plan of getting at the child labor evil is to prohibit by sederal statute any interstate commerce in articles which are the product of such labor. Some who recognize the force of the senator's arguments against child labor maintain that the states should be left to put reforms on this subject in execution and that his bill would, if enacted into law, be a step in the direction of centralization and an unwise extension of the federal power. In reply to these contentions Senator Beveridge urges that, while in some states there are good laws against child labor, in others the laws are either inefficient or poorly enforced and that the matter as a national evil can only be dealt with adequately by a national law.

Child labor laws exist already in many states, and in several new governors inaugurated in January made recommendations as to such legislation, The factory inspector of Pennsylvania in a recent address stated that in the tobacco making establishments of Pittsburg children as young as eight and nine years could be found at work.

Missouri has an anti chad labor law, but the labor unions are agitating for its amendment and more rigid enforcement of the statute.

Senator Beveridge illustrated his speech in the senate with photographs showing the conditions amid which children sometimes work. He points out that as the result of labor under such conditions many die, while others grow up dwarfed, crooked and weak, their minds dulled and clouded and their souls darkened and vicious. He maintains that many more children are employed in factories than the census figures show. The senator tells of a tiny girl seven years old who worked twelve hours a day in a canning factory in Maryland, a state having over 200 establishments employing children. of the Children," tells of a little girl when I gets home, and so I goes to

On one of the evenings at which she appeared in the opera at the Manhattan some of her countrymen in the United States formed a party to hear her sing, and the Australian bush cry, "Coo-ee!" which has often been heard at Covent Garden, London, when Melba sang, greeted for the first time the startled ears of the opera goers at the Manhattan.

The number 23 is generally regarded as a hoodoo number, but that depends. Mme. Melba did not consider it such when she was recalled that number of times on her first appearance in Philadelphia in the role of Mimi in Puccini's opera, "La Boheme," several seasons ago. The great cantatrice has enjoyed many triumphs, but that one stands out above all others. She and Kubelik, the violinist, are said to hold the record in the matter of encores.

Bought A Tongueless Horse.

A savage deed was perpetrated by some person during a sale at the R. Mary Marshall farm during a sale, and here will be trouble if the man can be found by the police. While the sale was in progress some person went into a stable and deliberately cut the tongue from a horse. The vandalism was not discovered until after the animal had been sold and the new owner was preparing to lead it away by placing a bit in its mouth. It was then killed.
