On or about the 16th of this month the Nittany Furnace will be put in full blast again. This is much sooner than was expected at the time of the explosion. When started up it will be run to its fullest capacity in order to make up some of the lost time.
Edward and Theodore Haupt have received the contract from Benjamin Bradley to furnish the concrete blocks for the Episcopal Parish house. This will be the first experiment with the cement blocks in Bellefonte and it will be carefully scrutinized by those who have any idea of building. Just now lumber in Bellefonte is going so high in price that some buildings that might have been erected this summer, under more favorable circumstances, have been abandoned. It is said that you can send lumber delivered to Bellefonte for much less than you must pay here. We believe that our home dealers should have the local trade before anybody else, but when the high prices are demanded by local dealers, we deem it proper to add a little encouragement to the man who wants to build and thinks there is no hope.

Friday morning he got up early and, after making the fire in the stove, went to the barn to do the feeding. While in the haymow throwing down hay he happened to look out and discovered his house on fire. He quickly ran to the house and telephoned all along the line for help. His friends quickly responded, and with their aid he was able to save a few things on the first floor, such as the piano and several other articles of furniture, but everything on the second story went up in smoke with the building. About thirty chickens were also cremated. The fire originated from a defective flue. His loss is between $2000 and $2500. The house was insured in the Grange Insurance Co. for $800, and the furniture $500 in Gray's insurance agency, Bellefonte.
