

The President's New Commission.

WARREN S. STONE.

INDUSTRIAL peace through betterment of the relations existing between labor and capital is the noble aim of the commission recently created at the instance of President Roosevelt. The president might have used the sum of money which he received as a part of the Nobel prize for his personal benefit, but he decided it would give him more satisfaction should the fund be devoted to the furtherance of peace in the world of industry. In his dispatch to the Norwegian parliament accepting the peace prize Mr. Roosevelt said: "After much thought I have concluded that the best and most fitting way to apply the amount of the prize is by using it as a foundation to establish at Washington a permanent industrial peace committee. The object will be to strive for better and more equitable relations among my countrymen who are engaged, whether as capitalists or wage-workers, in industrial and agricultural pursuits. This will carry out the purpose of the founder of the prize, for in modern life it is as important to work for the cause of just and righteous peace in the industrial world as in the world of nations."

Shortly after the award to him of the peace prize the president designated as a board of trustees to make use of the sum of money accompanying it, amounting to nearly $38,000, the following representative men: Chief Justice Fuller of the supreme court of the United States, Secretary Wilson of the department of agriculture, Secretary Straus of the department of commerce and labor, John Mitchell, president of the United Mine Workers of America, and Marvin Huggitt, president of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad. Early in February Senator John H. Daniel of Virginia, a Democrat, but an ardent admirer of some of Mr. Roosevelt's ideas, introduced in congress a bill legally establishing the peace commission and defining its scope and powers. The bill, which subsequently became a law, authorized the trustees already named and two others representing the general public to take charge of the fund and to receive further donations to the foundation and also to appoint a committee of nine persons to be known as the "industrial peace committee." This committee will receive the income from the foundation and apply it to expenditures incident to its work. Secretary Straus received from the president the check accompanying the peace prize and invested it in United States 2 per cent bonds. The income will be but little more than $700, but it is expected that the amount of the foundation will be considerably increased by popular subscriptions to it and that in this way the work of the industrial committee may be extended.

There are millionaires who would be willing to make large contributions to the fund, but it is hoped that the increase will be due chiefly to subscriptions of comparatively small amounts from the general public. Among the nine men appointed to serve on the committee are Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor; Lucius Tuttle, president of the Boston and Maine railroad; Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul, Judge Elbert H. Gary of the United States Steel corporation, Daniel J. Keefe, president of the International Longshoremen's association, and Warren Sanford Stone, who succeeded the late P. M. Arthur as grand chief of the International Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

There was a meeting of the board of trustees in Washington recently, and it was then announced that the committee of nine would be ready to get down to real business early next fall, that the work of organization would be simple and that the mapping out of the line of action to be pursued by the committee would be taken up soon. It is thought possible that in time all disputes between labor and capital which cannot otherwise be settled may be referred to the commission for final decision. An annual conference is to be conducted each year at Washington by the committee, and special conferences will be called when events in the industrial world furnish the occasion for them.

ADMIRE UNITED STATES.

Baron d'Estournelles de Constant, Noted French Peace Advocate.
Baron d'Estournelles de Constant, who came to this country to attend the dedication of the Carnegie Institute at Pittsburgh and the national arbitration and peace congress at New York, is one of the most distinguished public men of France. He has had a career of exceptional activity and usefulness, and his services in the cause of international arbitration have given him a front rank among the friends of peace between the nations. When he spells his name in full, it reads Paul Henri Benjamin Balluat d'Estournelles de Constant. He is about fifty-four years of age and was born at La Fleche. He has been mayor of Clermont and Creans, is an officer of the Legion of Honor, author and lecturer and is laureate of the French academy, has been chancellor of the French embassy in London, representative of the French government at Tunis, Montenegro, Turkey and Holland, served for a number of years in the chamber of deputies and recently became a member of the French senate. He was a delegate to the first conference at The Hague and is a member of the permanent international court of arbitration. He visited this country three years ago and was then the recipient of many attentions. He has invited the American delegates to the next meeting of the interparliamentary union to be his guests on a tour of France. The special interest that he takes in the United States is due in part to the fact that he married an American lady. The baron is seeking to organize the representative men of every nation into an international federation whose motto is "My Country's Good Through the Peace of the World." It is largely because of the work of this society that the policy of the French government has been changed in respect to questions bearing on war.

GENEROUS MRS. MACKAY.

Fondness of a Millionaire's Wife For Giving Happiness.

The wife of Clarence Mackay, capitalist, yachtsman and clubman, has a great deal of money to spend, and while she uses much of it on personal adornments and in the gratification of artistic tastes she does not believe in spending all her income in such ways. The Mackay home, near Roslyn, N. Y., known as Harbor Hill, is a splendid estate, but the Mackays do not keep up their big establishment for their own enjoyment exclusively. The people of Roslyn have many opportunities to see its attractions, and the fair mistress of Harbor Hill often invites the school children of the village or parties of the townspeople to fetes of various kinds upon the grounds, which are nearly as extensive as Central park, New York. Mrs. Mackay gave $50,000 for the erection of a new church for Trinity Episcopal parish, Roslyn, and its dedication recently was an important event in church circles on Long Island. She had previously given money to aid in the erection of a parish house.

Mrs. Mackay was Miss Katherine Duer and was one of the most popular and clever of the belles of the Four Hundred before her marriage to the son of the cable magnate, the late John W. M. Mackay. She has a literary bent, having published volumes in both prose and verse, and is a leading spirit in the educational affairs of Roslyn, being a member of the school board.

RICHARD MANSFIELD.

An Incident in Connection With "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."
Richard Mansfield, whose starring tour this season has been cut short by illness, is regarded by many as the greatest of living American actors and has mastered a large number of exceedingly difficult roles. One of the most difficult is that of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde in the play of the same name. When the story was still a fresh topic of conversation the actor in his presentation of the dual role of the drama made an especially strong hit. Mr. Mansfield always has been averse to coming out and making a bow before the curtain after a death scene. One night a large audience had witnessed his performance of the role of the genial and kindly physician and the fiendish character into which at times the doctor was accustomed to turn. The curtain was slowly descending on the last act. Mansfield as the dual fiend was in the throes of death, scratching the carpet with his fingers and gasping for breath. When the audience had recovered from its terror in beholding such a terrible death the applause became insistent. The people would not leave the theater. "Speech, speech!" they cried.

At last the stage manager said: "On behalf of Messrs. Mansfield, Jekyll and Hyde I wish to thank you for your applause. These gentlemen would gladly respond to your calls, but wish me to state that 'dead men tell no tales.'"

Many persons imagine that their present existence is a reincarnation. There are some who think that they can remember dimly days of long ago. They like certain periods in the world's history. If there is anything in this theory, then Mansfield must have lived in the time of David Garrick and been his ardent admirer. After Garrick he named his New York theater and also the Garrick theater in Philadelphia. With Garrick, moreover, Mansfield believes that the truly great actor should be at home in either comedy or tragedy.

The Cold Winter.
The year 1709 was that famous winter called by distinction "the cold winter." All the rivers and lakes were frozen, and even the sea for several miles from the shore. The ground was frozen in England nine feet deep. Birds and beasts died in the fields, and men perished by thousands in their houses. In the south of France the olive trees were killed and the wine plantations mostly destroyed. The Adriatic sea was frozen and even the Mediterranean about Genoa. The citron and orange groves suffered extremely in Italy.

"The Blood is The Life."

Science has never gone beyond the above simple statement of scripture. But it has illuminated that statement and given it a meaning ever broadening with the increasing breadth of knowledge. When the blood is "bad" or impure it is not alone the body which suffers through disease. The brain is also affected, and many an evil deed or impure thought can be directly traced to the impurity of the blood. Foul, impure blood can be made pure by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures and purifies the blood, thereby curing pimples, blotches, eruptions and other cutaneous affections, as eczema, tetter, or salt-rheum, hives and other manifestations of impure blood.

In the cure of scrofulous swellings, enlarged glands, open eating ulcers, or old sores, the "Golden Medical Discovery" has performed the most marvelous cures. In cases of old sores, or open eating ulcers, it is well to apply to the open sores Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve, which possesses wonderful healing potency when used as an application to the sores in conjunction with the use of "Golden Medical Discovery" as a blood cleansing constitutional treatment. If your druggist don't happen to have the "All-Healing Salve" in stock, you can easily procure it by enclosing fifty-four cents in postage stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post. Most druggists keep it as well as the "Golden Medical Discovery."

You can't afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a medicine of known composition, having a complete list of ingredients in plain English on its bottle-wrapper, the same being attested as correct under oath. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels.

HUSSEIN ALI MIRZA.

The Prince Imperial of the Ancient Empire of Persia.
So much has been said about the experiment Persia is making in the direction of parliamentary government that it is natural interest should be felt not only in the new ruler of the ancient empire, Ali Mohammed Mirza, but in the latter's son, the heir to the throne, Hussein Ali Mirza. Should he ever wear the crown he will be Persia's two hundred and fifty-sixth sov-
