

Odd Phases of Jamestown's Fair.

WHEN it was decided to hold an exposition to commemorate the tercentennial of the settlement of Jamestown from April 23 to Dec. 1, this year, the promoters of the enterprise set about the task of making it different from similar projects of the past. They were fortunate in receiving the hearty support of the United States government for their plans and in obtaining from a large number of states appropriations for buildings and exhibits. The South American states responded in most instances to the advances made by representatives of the exposition, so that almost all will have some kind of participation in the tercentennial.

The United States government, instead of making a large appropriation in aid of the fair itself, set apart about $1,500,000 to be used in the construction of its own buildings at the exposition and in the erection of two extensive piers in front of the fair grounds. It has put forth efforts in furtherance of the great international naval display, which is to be held under its auspices beginning May 13 and ending Nov. 20. President Roosevelt on the authorization of congress invited all the nations of the earth to send their ships of war to participate in this display, and it has been estimated that the value of the battleships, cruisers, torpedo boats and other naval craft taking part will not fall short of $250,000,000. Besides this there will be a great assemblage of maritime and pleasure craft and ships representing the progress made in maritime industries in the past 300 years. There will be twenty yacht races on the waters of Hampton Roads, and one of the spectacles which will attract the widest interest will be the reproduction of the famous contest between the Mer-

CAREER OF CAVALIERI.

Beautiful Cantatrice Was Not Contented to Remain a Music Hall Singer. Lina Cavaleri, who made a pronounced hit as a member of Heinrich Conried's Metropolitan Opera company the past season, was heralded as a great beauty before her advent on American shores. Some years ago she was known as "the most beautiful girl in Venice." A little later they called her in Paris "the most beautiful woman in Europe." When she stepped ashore at New York with Manager Conried last autumn, he enthusiastically declared her to be "the most beautiful woman in the world."

Not many years ago she was selling flowers with her mother in her native Italy. She also worked at one time as a seamstress. Then she began singing in music halls and soon had won great popularity because of her comeliness and the quality of her voice. But she was ambitious. She was not satisfied to remain a music hall favorite. She longed for success in grand opera. It is sometimes said that her fondness for a Russian prince had something to do with this. She has had several love affairs. One was with an Italian offcer of noble birth, who was prevented from marrying her by the rigid regulations regarding the dowries which brides of officers in the Italian army must have. The Russian nobleman hesitated about marrying a music hall singer, but, as the story goes, was inclined to make the beautiful cantatrice his wife if only she could win success in opera. Her first attempt was a failure, and it was all off between the lovers. But success did come to her not long afterward.

The Potato.
The common potato was at the time of the discovery of America in cultivation from Chile, to which it is indigenous, along the greater part of the Andes as far north as New Granada. It was introduced from Quito into Spain about 1580 under the name of "papa," which in Spanish it still bears. From Spain it found its way to Italy, where it became known as "tartuffolo," and thence was carried to Mons, in Belgium, by one of the attendants of the pope's legate to that country. In 1588 it was sent by Philippe de Sivry, governor of Mons, to the botanist, De L'Ecuse, professor at the University of Leyden, who in 1601 published the first good description of it under the name of "Papas peruanorum," and stated that it had then spread throughout Germany. Recommended in France by Caspar Bauhin, the culture of the tuber rapidly extended in 1592 throughout Franche Comte, the Vosges and Burgundy. But the belief becoming prevalent that it caused leprosy and fever, it underwent an ordeal of persecution from which it did not recover until three-quarters of a century afterward.

TEDDY JUNIOR AT HARVARD.

How the President's Son Won a Much Coveted Post. President Roosevelt's eldest son, Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., is often annoyed by having to be so much in the public eye while pursuing his course at Harvard university. His position as a student is rather a trying one in view of the publicity thrust upon him by reason of his father's high station, but he is considered to have shown good sense in the main and is popular with his fellow students. This is shown in the fact that he was recently chosen assistant manager of the varsity crew. A student who wins this post has to earn the appointment. Young Roosevelt could not have obtained it simply on the ground of being the president's son.

There were quite a number of candidates for the position, and all were SNAPSHOT OF THEODORE ROOSEVELT, JR. assigned to the task of soliciting subscriptions for the support of rowing. When Teddy junior started to ask for subscriptions he got a good deal of "joshing" from fellow students, but kept at it until he had raised $900, which was $100 more than any other student raised. The contest then narrowed down to four candidates, and they were required to do odd jobs about the boathouse, such as filling the tank and running errands for members of the crew. Not even this fazed the president's son, and he finally won the appointment. In the natural course of events he will become manager of the crew in his senior year, and this is a position which carries with it much social prestige.

An Unfortunate Cardinal.
Cardinal Espinosa, some time president of Castile, was engaged in conversation with Philip II, king of Spain, when the king, suddenly irritated at something, said to him:
"Cardinal, take heed! You are speaking to the president of Castile."
The cardinal, understanding that he was dismissed from office, fell to the ground. His pulse showed no sign of life, and to all appearances the king's wrath had killed his minister. It was decided that the unfortunate cardinal should be cut open and embalmed. The embalmers commenced work, when the prelate awoke, with a scream of agony, and attempted to struggle with the operator. His wounds were fatal, however, and he died immediately.

portance, as much of the distance is over the open sea and part is through the deep mud of the Everglades. Only about sixty-five miles of the extension is to be built on natural foundation. The rest of the line must depend for support on bridges, viaducts, dredged embankments and filled in swamps. About thirty islands are made use of in the building of the line, and about five miles of it run over great concrete arches resting on piers rising out of water from ten to thirty feet in depth. On this part of the route the future traveler may well imagine that he is going to Cuba by railroad across the ocean.

Prerogatives of Rank.

The Brambleville postmaster looked out with a frown from his barred window at the returned traveler who was questioning him. "I can't go out of this pen of mine till the mail's distributed," he said, with resentment. "The new rules and regulations don't hardly let a man breathe. What was it you asked me about the fire department?"
"No, Jed isn't chief any more. That's all owing to the city folks that come here now and try to run our whole village."
"There was a little spark of a fire down in one of our cottages, and because our fire department didn't get there quite as quick as they expected they 'instituted inquiries'—I'm giving you their own words—and when they found the two ladders had been in Jed's orchard and that had made a little delay they raised such a lot of talk that Jed resigned."
"As he said, if the chief of the fire department hasn't got the right to borrow a couple of ladders from the engine house when he needs 'em to pick his fruit, who has?"
"But you 'can't reason much with these city folks. They're a kind of a high handed lot."

The Story of a Medicine.

Its name—"Golden Medical Discovery" was suggested by one of its most important and valuable ingredients—Golden Seal root.
Nearly forty years ago, Dr. Pierce discovered that he could, by the use of pure, triple-refined glycerine, aided by a certain degree of constantly maintained heat and with the aid of apparatus and appliances designed for that purpose, extract from our most valuable native medicinal roots their curative properties much better than by the use of alcohol, so generally employed. So the now world-famed "Golden Medical Discovery" for the cure of weak stomach, indigestion, or dyspepsia, torpid liver, or biliousness and kindred derangements was first made, as it ever since has been, without a particle of alcohol in its make-up.
A glance at the full list of its ingredients, printed on every bottle-wrapper, will show that it is made from the most valuable medicinal roots found growing in our American forests. All these ingredients have received the strongest endorsement from the leading medical experts of this and other countries. A certain number of these ingredients are the best remedies for the diseases for which "Golden Medical Discovery" is advised.
A little book of these endorsements has been compiled by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., and will be mailed free to any one asking same by postal card, or letter addressed to the Doctor as above. From these endorsements, copied from standard medical books of all the different schools of practice, it will be found that the ingredients composing the "Golden Medical Discovery" are advised not only for the cure of the above mentioned diseases, but also for the cure of all catarrhal, bronchial and throat affections, accompanied with catarrhal discharges, hoarseness, sore throat, lingering, or hang-on-coughs, and all those wasting affections which, if not promptly and properly treated, are liable to terminate in consumption. Take Dr. Pierce's Discovery in time and persevere in its use until you give it a fair trial and it is not likely to disappoint. Too much must not be expected of it. It will not perform miracles. It will not cure consumption in its advanced stages. No medicine will. It will cure the affections that lead up to consumption, if taken in time.

An Unfinished Portrait.

The most important painting executed by Velasquez, the celebrated Spanish painter, toward the end of his career, and by some considered his masterpiece, was the large group at Madrid known as "The Maids of Honor." Into this painting Velasquez introduced a portrait of himself working at an easel. King Philip was mightily interested in the progress of this picture and visited the painter daily during its production. At length in the course of one of these visits Velasquez laid down palette and brushes and declared the painting finished.
"Not quite," said the king. "One detail is lacking." And, taking up a brush, he began to work on the portrait of the painter. With a few touches he sketched on his breast the cross of the order of knighthood of Santiago, one of the highest honors it was in his power to bestow.

Perplexing Associations.

The frequent association of things between which there is no obvious connection is always rather perplexing, says Barry Pain. Why do vegetarians generally believe in votes for women? Why are good chess players generally fond of coffee? Why have artists generally got pleasant voices? Why are humorous writers mostly melancholy people? I suppose there is an explanation if one could think it out.

Helping the Blind.

"I hope the blind man is at the push cart market today," said the woman as she started out. "I feel so sorry for him. I always buy my candles from him. Then, too, he sells them for 1 cent apiece, and the other day when it rained and he wasn't there I had to pay 2 cents for them at the grocery. Whenever I can I live up to my rule to patronize the blind."—New York Press.

CORNER OF MINES BUILDING AND FRONT OF AUDITORIUM BUILDING.
rimae and Monitor. The federal government has set aside a large portion of its appropriation for this spectacle, which will be repeated at stated times during the exposition season, and the fight will occur on the exact spot where the original engagement took place during the civil war. As it happens, this was precisely in front of the exposition grounds.

The advantage the exposition possesses by reason of its location on the shores of Hampton Roads has been seized and well utilized in the planning of the grounds and the aquatic features of the show. The entrance to the exposition from the direction of the ocean is under a magnificent arch, illuminated at night with thousands of electric lights. Passing under this arch, the boats enter Smith harbor, named in honor of Captain John Smith, and persons on stepping ashore find themselves in Raleigh square. The basin known as Smith harbor is formed by piers extending out into the waters of Hampton Roads 2,000 feet. They are 200 feet wide, and on the shore line accommodate handsome passenger stations. At the farther ends they are joined by a third pier, arched in the center, to admit of the passage of water craft beneath. These farther ends of the piers contain towers equipped with wireless telegraph apparatus and powerful searchlights. The piers were erected by the government at an expense of $400,000. The basin formed by the piers comprises an area of forty acres and will be used for all sorts of minor aquatic events. The electric illumination of the piers, together with the subaqueous illumination of the basin, will form a most brilliant and novel spectacle.

One of the historical features of the fair is the reproduction of the village of Jamestown as it is supposed to have appeared in the seventeenth century, with stockades, forts and Indian villages. Among the spectacles and entertainments on the War Path, the Jamestown Midway, will be some having historical themes, one of the latter being a drama entitled "Pocahontas," putting on the boards the romance of the Indian princess who saved the life of Captain John Smith.
