RECENT DEATHS.

WILLIAM THOMAS HILLIBISH—was instantly killed by a train at New Florence, a little town West of Johnstown where Thomas A. Shoemaker has been doing contract work for the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. When the sad news reached Bellefonte, Saturday night, there were many expressions of regret. Mr. Hillibish was master mechanic for Eyre & Shoemaker, and after getting his supper Saturday evening he walked down the track. As he was walking along he saw a freight train coming and he stepped from one track to another when a fast passenger train struck him from the rear. He was badly mangled up, and the body was picked up about one hundred feet from where he was struck with his head severed just above the upper lip. The remains were brought to Bellefonte Sunday evening in charge of Rush Larimer, who is also an employe of Eyre & Shoemaker. On arrival here the body was taken to the home of his sister, Miss Martha Hillibish, on Water street. "Billy" Hillibish, as he was known here, for years was employed at the Jenkins & Lilly machine shops and was one of Bellefonte's highly respected citizens, and for several years was a member of council. He was also a member of the Logan Fire Co., and was an all around good fellow. He possessed a kind, noble disposition, and was the main support of his sister, Miss Martha Hillibish, who has always made her home here. It was only about four weeks ago since he was in Bellefonte. The deceased was born in Bellefonte and was a son of the late Nicholas and Johanna Hillibish, at one time one of the wealthiest families in our town. Mr. Hillibish was born in the house now occupied by Mrs. Mitchell on Spring street, May 20, 1856, making his age 51 years. He leaves to mourn his death the following brothers and sisters: Frank, Edmund, George, and John, of Ohio; Mrs. Roland Cheesman, of Washington, D. C., and Miss Martha, of Bellefonte. He was a member in good standing at the Independent Order of Odd Fellows of Bellefonte. The funeral took place Monday afternoon from the Methodist church at four o'clock. Rev. Stein officiating. Interment in the Union cemetery.
