PARTIES AND HARD TIMES.

The Providence Journal, the leading republican newspaper of New England, takes Speaker Cannon to task for asserting that good times came with one party and bad times with another. It says:

"In an address delivered at his home town of Danville, Ill., last year Speaker Joseph G. Cannon attributed our abundant national prosperity to the continuance of the republican party in power, and reminded his hearers that under the Democratic regime in 1893 no less than 3,000,000 American workmen were out of employment. This was a characteristic bit of Republican oratory; it is a favorite device of the party spellbinders to take credit for all the beneficence of Nature and to insist that the sun shines more brightly and the dew falls more generously under republican auspices. But certain recent events are calculated to embarrass Mr. Cannon, and the day may come when he will wish he had not been so quick to identify the hard times of fourteen years ago with Democratic administration.

"For there are hundreds of thousands of workmen idle in the United States at the present moment, and there are likely to be more. Chairman Fowler of the house committee on banking and currency, who has just been reappointed by Speaker Cannon, puts the possible number of the unemployed at 2,000,000 and he can hardly be called a prejudiced prophet. And if the Democratic administration was responsible for the condition of things in 1893, it is only fair to hold the republican administration responsible for the condition of things now, and the worse the situation becomes the more should the speaker of the house of representatives be seriously ill of pneumonia.
