L. F. Mayes, Auctioneer

At this season of the year the auction eer is an important individual; he stands on the "block" day after day disposing of live stock and farm implements and upon his judgment, intelligence and en durance, large interests depend. Among the new men in this line who have attained unusual success in a short time Ambrose is a first class fellow and we would like to see him get enough out of it to keep himself and a darling little wife the balance of his life.
