REVOLVING SIPHON.

An Interesting Experiment With Simple Apparatus.

The principle illustrated in the accompanying cut might readily serve to generate power without the use of machinery. It is given, however, merely as an interesting and easily made experiment.

Pour water into a good sized glass tumbler until it is two-thirds full and stand it upon a canister to give it the necessary elevation. Through the flat cork on the surface of the water is a stout straw which transversely supports one of the same diameter. To the latter are attached two other straws of smaller diameter, each of these having a bit of straw about an inch in length attached to the end at an obtuse angle with the outlets cut on the slant to make easier the exit of the water.

SIPHON IN ACTION.

All the joints are hollow and are made water tight with sealing wax. The ends of the transverse straw are likewise closed with the wax, but the ends of the depending straws are left open.

Now, to start this unique homemade apparatus in action let two persons suck the open ends of the depending straws until the water begins to flow, and when they take their mouths away the device will begin to revolve, while the water pours steadily from the open ends.

This revolving siphon will soon empty the tumbler, but you may keep the action up as long as you please by pouring water in as fast as the straws

MUSICAL MYSTERY GAME.

A Missing Word Story That Will Interest Little Folks.

An interesting little musical game may be played in the following manner: Have as many slips of paper as there are guests and write on each slip a story after the following example, omitting the words with a musical significance and substituting dashes in their stead. The guests are requested to read the story and to supply the missing words, having had it explained to them that the wanted words must be musical terms. The words to be omitted appear in parentheses:

Story.—John Smith was the (minor) son of (Major) Smith, who belonged to the (staff) of a newspaper of (note). The (rest) of the Smith family were pleasant people, loving a good (time). They were (natural) in manner, and the (theme) of their conversation was always agreeable. John's father, the (major), would often (pitch) into a hot discussion on politics, for his reasoning was (sharp). John's younger sister could sing a (solo) admirably, her voice being full of (melody) and never (flat). But she required a good piano for her use, one that was in splendid (tune).

To the boy or girl who fills the spaces with the correct words or come nearest to doing so a simple prize may be given. A sheet of music would be quite appropriate. Ten minutes should be allowed the players in which to supply the story with the missing words.

Who's It For Spoons?

In this game one person takes his stand in the center of the circle, blindfolded and his hands extended before him, in each of which he holds a large spoon. The other players march around him, clapping their hands in time to a tune, which may be sung or played upon the piano in any slow measure suitable for marching. When the blind player calls out "Spoons," the others stop. He then finds his way to any player that he can and must ascertain who he is by touching him with the spoons only, which he may use as he pleases. If he guesses correctly the one whom he is "spooning," that one is blindfolded, and the game is played again as before.

Conundrums.

When are silks like the clouds? When changeable.

When is a book like the holy days? When lent.

When is a child at school and a rope alike? When taught (taut).

When is a message like a train of cars? When special.

When is a boat like a hatter fitting a cap? When it is can-sized (capsized).

When is a man like Mont Blanc? When peaked (piqued).

What He'd Like to Be.

Jimmy—What does papa do, ma?

Mother—He's a tea sampler, my boy—samples different kinds of tea.

Jimmy—When I grow up, ma, I'm going to be a cake sampler.

King John and McCarty.

During a session of the territorial legislature of Montana a measure was introduced which involved grave constitutional questions, as it seemed to some. One orator declaimed quite fiercely against it, urging that it was clearly in opposition to the great principles of the Magna Charta which the brave barons in days of old had wrested from King John. Another legislator rose immediately to reply, determined to show that he for one was not to be overwhelmed by high sounding words or obscure allusions. Plunging at once into his subject, he declared with much vigor that it was time for the legislative bodies of Montana to think and act for themselves without reference to the opinions or principles of King John and his man McCarty.

Spoiled His Appetite.

"Well, how are you getting on with your French, my son?" asked the father at supper.

"Very well, sir," the lad replied.

The father beamed with pleasure.

"Ask politely in French for some peas," he said.

There was an awkward pause.

"But, father, I don't want any peas."

Continued In Our Next.

It was in the days before railways, telephones and telegraph lines had reached the interior of Pennsylvania, and news traveled slowly. There had been a presidential election, and everybody was anxious to learn the result. A crowd had collected at the postoffice in one of the villages, waiting for the evening mail to come in from a station sixteen miles distant. At last a man emerged from the office with a paper in his hand, and a number of citizens gathered about the man and waited in breathless silence until he had finished reading and had thrown the paper in the air with a shout of exultation. Then several citizens demanded: "What's the news? Who's elected?"

"Elected nothing," replied the man. "Esmeralda Fitzhugh married Reginald Abercrombie after all."

Then it was discovered that the man had been reading the concluding chapters of a love story in a New York weekly.—Lippincott's.

A Comforting Explanation.

A prominent Baltimore lawyer, like many young attorneys, got his first case by assignment from the bench. His client had been indicted for murder, and his conviction was a foregone conclusion.

The result of the trial was a sentence to be hanged. But the man made an appeal to the governor for a pardon and was awaiting a reply thereto when his lawyer visited him in his cell.

"I got good news for you—very good news!" the young lawyer said, grasping the man's hand.

"Did the governor—is it a pardon?" the man exclaimed joyously.

"Well—no. The fact is the governor refused to interfere. But an uncle of yours has died and left you $200, and you will have the satisfaction of knowing that your lawyer got paid, you know!" was the comforting explanation.—Harper's.
