MILTON D. PURDY.

Noted "Trust Buster" Who Has Been Nominated For Federal Bench.

Milton D. Purdy, who has been appointed to the federal bench of the district of Minnesota by the president, has won a reputation while an assistant attorney general of the United States as one of the principal "trust busters" of the administration. He has had chief charge of the prosecution of cases under the anti-trust laws and has made a record which has marked him as a lawyer of exceptional ability. He is rather young for the position to which he has been nominated. being but forty-one, and the two senators from Minnesota favored a man of sixty-three, W. E. Hale of Minneapolis. The president has adopted a policy of not appointing to the federal bench a man over fifty years of age except under unusual circumstances; hence his determination to name Mr. Purdy instead of the lawyer favored by the Minnesota members of the senate. The rise of Mr. Purdy to his present position of influence in his profession was not anticipated by those who watched him as a boy in Summit county, O. He finally obtained a good education, graduating from the University of Minnesota and from the college of law of that institution. But as a youngster he was considered rather lacking in ambition. His father had a pottery shop, and young Purdy worked in it. He had no desire at the time to be anything but a maker of pots, but his mother insisted that he should go to high school, and after that came college. Speaking of his work in the pot shop, the jurist Presently a second warning. 'Only fifof the future once told of his earnings teen minutes left, sir.' 'All right.' there as follows:

BOODLER'S PUNISHMENT. A

The House of a San Francisco Grafter Which Was Wrecked by a Bomb.

It is often hard to administer appropriate punishment to persons guilty of "boodling" or "grafting," and this fact has sometimes led indignant citizens to impose on such malefactors penalties not prescribed by the regular courts. An instance of this is the punishment visited upon James L. Gallagher, chief of the boodling supervisors in San Francisco. His house was wrecked by a dynamite bomb which shattered the front of the building and came near killing its occupants. Many windows in surrounding buildings were broken by the shock. The photograph reproduced herewith tells the story of the vengeance taken upon a recreant official in a graphic manner.

A Taft Story.

The Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott in writing about Secretary William H. Taft in the Outlook says:

"He is not as quick in his motions, either physically or intellectually, as the president, but he is not less a master workman. The day he was to start for Cuba he was at his desk finishing up some last details. His assistant gave him warning. 'Train starts in half an hour.' 'All right,' was the reply. Finally, 'You've only three minutes "I was employed on Saturdays and left, sir.' 'All right,' came back as

An Original Design For an Inexpensive Material.

Here is shown an original design for an applique portiere, one especially adapted to the country home, and its adapted to the country home, and its chief charm is that it is available for inexpensive or more pretentious ma-terials. Wash goods may be used, and some of the new cottons in pastel or more pronounced shadings combine very effectively. To get a working pattern for the applique draw lines across and up and terials. To set a constant of the term and the set of term and the set of the term and the set of the term and the set of term and the set of the term and the set of terms and the set of terms and the set of terms and the set of the term and the set of terms and the set of terms and the set of the term and the set of terms and the set of the term and the set of the term and the set of terms and the set of the terms and the set of terms and terms and terms and the set of terms and terms and the set of terms and terms a applique draw lines across and up and down from the dotted lines on the margin of the filustration over the design part, forming squares. Use red ink or blue pencil. Take wrapping paper the width of the door or window for which the curtain is intended and divide into large squares with the same number of spaces as on this pattern. Fill in the squares on the wrapping paper from the small squares, and a full size pattern will be the result. Cut out and lay over the material and cut applique. Cover the seams with fine braid or cord. If thin material is used, it should be lined in order to provide a substantial backing.

A good color scheme for such a curtain is old rose for the portiere, with the dark part of the appliqued design terra cotta and the light parts, ovals, etc., nile green. The tassels should be made of terra cotta slik cord.
