

RAY LAMPHERE.

Man Suspected in Laporte Murder Farm Case.

The unraveling of the Laporte murder farm mystery depends on a good deal on what is learned from Ray Lamphere, who was employed on the farm by Mrs. Guinness and is under arrest on suspicion of being himself amenable to the charge of murder.

crimes of murder and arson, but the authorities are convinced they have a good case against him. A curious circumstance is the fact that grasped in the hand of one of the men whose bodies were found beneath the ruins of the Guinness house was a lock of hair which is said to resemble exactly that of Lamphere, indicating that the latter was at least a participant in the murder of the victim and had a terrible struggle with him.

WHICH IS THE HAPPIER?

Careers of the Two Clemmons Sisters, One Being Mrs. Wong Sun Yue.

The divorce proceedings between Mr. and Mrs. Howard Gould have raised the question whether, despite the wealth she has enjoyed, Mrs. Gould is any more fortunate than her sister, formerly Miss Ella May Clemmons, now Mrs. Wong Sun Yue. The sisters have not had much to do with each other in recent years. The careers of both have been exceptional. Katherine Clemmons, now Mrs. Gould, went from the stage to reside over the home of a man who inherited millions. But the possession of fabulous wealth did not bring happiness to their fireside. The other sister, Ella May, also married a man of wealth and for a time enjoyed social rank in San Francisco, but in her case, too, money failed to make marriage a success. She separated from her husband, became a Roman Catholic and for many years worked in the Chinese quarter of San Francisco. When the bubonic plague broke out about eight years ago she won a reputation as a heroine and was called

"the angel of Chinatown." Her wealthy sister urged her to come and live with her and travel abroad, but she chose to pursue her own path among the humble and wretched. Just before the San Francisco earthquake she married a Chinaman whose acquaintance she made in the course of her life in the Celestial quarter. Earthquake and fire destroyed their home, and for a long time they lived in tents. They make a living now by selling Chinese curios. Mrs. Yue declares that her Chinese husband is good to her and that she loves him, so that perhaps she is, after all, the happier of the two sisters.

The Banker and the Poet.

"This minor poetry seems futile to me," the banker said, sneering. "Anybody can turn it out. A lunatic can write minor poetry. It's only a question of rhymes." "You sneer at rhymes," interjected the fat and bald poet. "Give me a rhyme for 'lounge.'" The banker thought for three minutes, but in vain. He was stumped. "Try me again," he said. "A rhyme for 'sylyph.'" Again the banker failed. "Rhyme for 'wamp,'" "Nothing doing," said the banker after a long pause. "Gulf," "mouth," "hemp," "pint," "puss."

"By jingo," said the banker, "I can't think of a rhyme for any of those words!" The minor poet tried him with "blige," "depth," "wolf," "with," "voit," "scarf," "saucie," "fugue," "bulb" and "bourn."

"I'm stuck," confessed the banker. "Minor poetry is harder than I thought. It's a wonder to me you fellows are not paid more."

"We don't care anything about the pay. It's the glory we are after," the poet answered, with dignity. "But I have been tricking you. For the words that I gave you there isn't a rhyme in the English tongue."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Mark Twain Pleads Innocence.

Eugene Ware of Topeka recently wrote to Mark Twain: "I picked up your last volume. I read it clear through from cover to cover. It was like a bottled flush—I could not lay it down."

Mr. Clemens answered as follows: "I am an old brass bound, copper riveted, fire assayed Presbyterian, with seventy-one years' experience in unworldliness, and I don't understand your metaphor. But I know it was intended as a compliment, and I make it cordially welcome."

A Mark of Respect.

Andrew Carnegie was entertaining a Montenegrin prince at Skibo castle. The morning after the prince's arrival a party of guests set out in a huge motor car for a long run, and as they whizzed past an inn a great crowd of highlanders rose from the benches before the inn and saluted.

The prince seemed amazed at the highland dress. "Why," he asked, "do these men go bare legged?" "It is a local custom," said Mr. Carnegie. "A mark of respect for you, sir. In some places people take off their hats to show honor to distinguished visitors; here they take off their trousers."

His Country.

An Irishman was returning to his own country after a long absence, and as the green hills and valleys hove in sight he became very enthusiastic. "Hurrah for Ireland!" he cried. "An Englishman passing exclaimed sarcastically: "Hurrah for hell!" "That's right," said Pat. "Very much for his own country!"—Judge's Library.

Grant the Philosopher.

Mrs. Grant once asked the general to discharge their old coachman, who had made a botch of some simple errand. "Well, mother," replied the hero of Appomattoch, "if John could do everything you wanted him to do and do it right he would not have to be our coachman."
