The question has more than once been raised as to the propriety of plays which depict so realistically the characters and ways of the underworld. The matter depends, of course, a great deal on the way in which the thing is done. This has been the only 'shocking' incident connected with 'Salvation Nell."

There is a widespread popular interest in the success of Mrs. Rachel Frease Green, the American soprano who recently made her debut in Covent Garden, London, singing the role of Sieglinde in "Die Walkuere." This is due in part to remembrance of the fact that she is from Canton, O., and that her ambition was encouraged by President McKinley. Her father, Judge Frease, one of the ploneers of the Ohio bar, was succeeded when he went on the bench by William McKinley, then a struggling young lawyer, as law partner of Judge George W. Belden. Mrs. Green's maternal grandfather. In the informal social gatherings that made up much of the home life of President McKinley and his wife Mrs. Green frequently was called on to sing and was encouraged by the president to develop her ambitions to the utmost. The last occasion was in the Canton home of W. S. Hawk of New York a few days before the Buffalo tragedy. President McKinley then prophesied flatteringly for her future. A short time later she sang at his funeral service and six years later at the funeral of Mrs. McKinley.
