SHE EARNS $10,000 A YEAR.

Miss Katherine I. Harrison, Private Secretary to the Late H. H. Rogers. Katherine I. Harrison, private secretary to the late H. H. Rogers, is harder to reach than J. P. Morgan, James Stillman, John W. Gates or any other of the kings of finance. She is the one woman in the world who knows everything that goes on in Standard or would it be better to have planked Oil. For doing what she is required to do-and not the least of her duties is to keep her mouth sealed-she receives $10,000 a year. You might count on your fingers the women in the United States who receive this salary.

What made Katherine I. Harrison so valuable to H. H. Rogers and his partners in the Standard Oil? A hundred answers could be given to this question. Other women are as bright, and other women are possessed of equal executive ability. But the best answer of them all may be summed up in two words-absolute trustworthiness.

Miss Harrison can keep a secret. She can hold information inviolate that would make a poor man a millionaire.

MISS KATHERINE I. HARRISON.

There are men who would pay a king's ransom to know a tithe of what she knows.

This important personage in the Standard Oil is tall and spare-close to six feet. Her face is stern, but comely. Altogether she is an attrac tive type of the American business woman. She dresses well, but severely, Her favorite office dress is a plain but short skirt of dullish blue, a white shirt waist, a blue four-in-hand tle and a turndown collar. When she goes out she wears a short, closely cut jacked of covert cloth and a toque trimmed with feathers. Her shoes are low cut and have broad soles.

But first of all the observer notes Miss Harrison's eyeglasses. They are set in a golden bow and have great. thick lenses. When you try to look at her through these fortresses of glass you see yourself reflected in tiny replica. On the contrary, they magnify to you Miss Harrison's steady, insistent eyes until they wring from you Miss Harrison wrote most of Mr. Rogers' letters. She signed many of his checks. She never committed her employer to anything.

Miss Harrison lives with her mother and two sisters in a handsome Queen Anne house at 1354 Dean street, Brooklyn. She contributes to the welfare of the family and has a pretty fortune. And how old is Miss Harrison? Well, she was Mr. Rogers' private secretary for eighteen years. She may be thirty-five; she may be more.

Next to Mrs. Hetty Green she ranks today as probably the most important business woman in all New York.

New View of Education of Women. Dr. Charles W. Eliot has been exceedingly gracious to college women's clubs since he laid down the burden of Harvard direction, and only spiteful women recall what strenuous opposition be made to certain innovations in Radeliffe. He has been addressing the intellectual women in and out of season, and he has urged them not to henpeck the men because of those intellectual attainments. In a recent address before a college club of Baltimore he praised higher education for women enthusiastically, but he deprecated the limited view generally assigned to it. He thinks that in the home education is of more genuine benefit to society and for the future of the race than in the professions and that in the last analysts knowledge benefits women only in so far as it trains them for their natural duties. Instead of seeing the menace other great educators see in the desire which the modern woman has for obtaining the best educational advantages, Dr. Eliot takes vast comfort in the idea. The next generation, he thinks, being trained by intelligent and intellectual mothers, will swing the pendulum the other way for the men of the American race. Instead of being consumed with business ambittions to the exclusion of mental culture, he holds, they will be trained from their cradle upward to estimate properly the necessity of college training.

THE AGONY OF INDECISION.

Some Women Slaves to the Habit of Vacillation.

I would rather regulate my life by the flip of a penny than suffer the tortures of indecision that I know some women do, says Ruth Cameron in a Pittsburg paper.

"Shall I get straw matting or denim for the new bedroom carpet?"

"Shall I have Mary sweep the front room today and wash the blankets tomorrow or wash the blankets today and clean the front rooms tomorrow? "Shall I have roast lamb and asparagus for the special company Sunday, steak?"

Hours and nerves and complexions they wear out swinging the balance back and forth between such weighty questions as these and in the end make no wiser decisions than if they had settled them offhand. Some women make themselves fairly wretched over their wardrobes, such awful opportunity for vacillation they find in choice of material and trimming and make. To others papering and carpeting resolve themselves into a perfect agony of indecision. "I would rather clean that house from top to bottom than pick out a living room carpet again," I heard one woman say the other day. "I do believe I got more to make up my mind than from all the dries there issued the group of virtue sweeping and dusting and washing I oppressing vice, assigned to Gian Bodid." We have just been through the logna, which is now the choice treaswarmth on the subject.
