THE NEWS IN CONDENSED FORM FROM ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTY

SNOW SHOE.

In St. Mary's church at the 9.30 o'clock mass Sunday morning, 11th, a large class of boys and girls received their first Holy Communion. The services were elaborate and impressive. The music was rendered by the children's choir, under the direction of Mrs. John R. Kelly. The altars, which were a mass of green and white flowers, were decorated by Justina Kelly and Rosellen McGowan. At the end of the mass the pastor turned and addressed the children. He took for his text "Hold fast that which thou hast, that no man take thy crown." Apoc. 3-11. He said in part:

My dear children, the happy moment has dawned in which the Saviour has taken up his abode with you. How happy you are to-day, which the Lord has made for you; happy are your parents with you; how happy is this whole community; how happy finally am I, your pastor, for at this moment I behold the realization of one of my fondest hopes—and yet, my dear children, a feeling of fear and sadness comes over me, when I think of your future. Will you remain children of God as you are kneeling in this consecrated place taking part in the sacred banquet served by angels? Will you keep the agreement you have to-day renewed and entered into with your Lord and Creator, which the Divine Saviour has sealed with you in Holy Communion with his own most precious blood; I know not, and for this very reason I am sad. I have often seen morning, that began with a glorious sunshine, change to gloomy mist and rain. So also it is with many persons at their first Holy Communion. The sun of Divine grace raises in the most glorious splendor, giving bright promises for the future, but there arises the poisonous mist of sin to overshadow grace."

He told them the crown the Saviour placed upon them, was more precious than all the treasures of the world, more costly than gold or precious stones. It is the crown of sanctifying grace, the fullness of which you have received in Holy Communion to-day. It is the crown of grace which makes you a child of God and an heir of the Kingdom of Heaven. It is the crown of the loveliest virtues, of humility and faith, hope and charity, of innocence and purity of heart. It is the crown which you ought to exchange at your death for the crown of eternal blessedness. He warns them against associating with godless, worthless persons which is bound to bring ruin to the soul. At the end of the service all present sang "Holy God."

His Exception.

A religious worker, while visiting a Western town, gave a "Talk for Men," during the course of which he expressed his conviction that no young man should visit any place to which he would not feel justified in taking his own sister. "Is there any young man present who thinks one may safely disregard this rule?" he asked. A youth in the rear of the hall arose and shouted in stentorian tone:

"Yes, sir, I do!"

"And what, sir," demanded the angry and surprised speaker, "is the place, you yourself would think of visiting, to which you would not take your sister?"

"The barber shop!" replied the youth.

He Needed It.

This happened on the Lake Shore flyer not long ago. A man rushed in from the car behind, evidently in great agitation, and said: "Has anybody in the car any whiskey? A woman in the car behind has fainted." Instantly dozens of flasks were produced. The man who had asked for it picked out the largest one, drew the cork, and put the bottle to his lips. With a long, satisfied sigh, he handed it back and remarked: "That did me a lot of good. I needed it, for it always makes me feel queer to see a woman faint."

Selecting One.

An old Southern dandy was presented with triplets and was so elated over the event that he called on everybody to see them. Among the visitors was an Irishman.

"Say, boss," exclaimed the old man, "what you think of that?"

"Well," said Pat, looking the babies over carefully and pointing to a healthy looking one, "I would keep that one."

Very Same.

Tommy was sent to the grocery store and said: "Please, sir, give me two pounds of the same butter as ma got last week."

The grocer smiling looked up and replied that he always liked to please his customers, when Tommy said, "Be sure it is the very same, as ma is expecting pa's relatives and she don't want them to come again."
