THE Pole, the Pole-what an awful fuss is going on over the Pole, yet it is not worth a chew of tobacco to any one-but there is great glory in finding it after two hundred years of searching for the thing.

Ten proposed amendments to the Constitution of this Commonwealth are to be voted for at the coming election. It seems to us "too much of the good thing at one time." Many a voter will be puzzled to understand all, to vote intelligently. Under this situation it would be advisable that every voter begin to study each amendment and keep studying the en- One from Alabama is the tail of a grass tire batch until election day, so that snake, he may know which of the ten he approves and which he disapproves, and vote accordingly. The face was without so much as a wrinkle. The weight of the petrified corpse was such that it required the combined strength of five men to raise the casket out of the grave, and even then this was accomplished only by raising one end up as the work proceeded. Once above the ground the remarkable condition of the body impelled Undertaker Spitler and the friends present to make a more detailed examination. The clothing upon the dead was also in a quite remarkable condition of preservation, perfectly whole, retaining a natural color, but when the fabric was touched it fell away, showing the disintegration. A portion of the gown was removed from the shoulder, and underneath the petrified flesh retained almost its natural smoothness and whiteness. The face Pole. House Burned. The dwelling owned by Mrs. Patrick Reardon, a widow, at the Eagleville Christmas time and then catch up station, was destroyed by fire about 8 o'clock last Saturday evening, the 4th. The origin is said to have been the knocking of a lamp off the organ by Mrs. Reardon while she was playing the instrument. The fire spread so quickly that the neighbors, who live some distance away, could not save much of the household goods. The loss of the property amounts to about $800, but whether it was insured is not ascertained. A portion of the house was built a few years ago and it was in fairly good
