Blind Man's Buff.

At a fashionable European hotel four plausible rogues not long ago treated themselves to a capital dinner in a private room and had no intention of paying for it. Having called the waiter and asked for the bill, one thrust his hand into his pocket as if to draw out his purse. The second prevented him, declaring he would pay. The third did the same. The fourth forbade the waiter taking money from either of them, but all three persisted. As none would yield, one said: "The best way to decide is to blind fold the waiter, and whoever he catches shall settle the bill, while the others shall tip the waiter."

This proposition was accepted, and while the waiter was groping his way about the room they slipped out of the house, one after another, and bolted

Let Us Smile.

There is no room for sadness when we see a cheery smile.
It always has the same good look—it never out of style.
It naves us on to try again when failure makes us blue.
The smiles of encouragement are good for me and you.
It pays a higher interest, for it is merely lent.
It's worth a million dollars and doesn't cost a cent.

According to Rule.

Oberlin was the first coeducational college in this country. In the early days it had a rule that in case there were but one man and one woman in a room at least one chair should be between them. One evening an instructor, passing one of the small sitting rooms, was horrified at beholding a young man and a young woman occupying the same chair.

"Sir," he demanded of the man student, "what is the meaning of this outrageous behavior? Do you not know the rules of the college?"
"Why—er—don't they say that if a man and a girl sit alone in a room they shall have one chair between them?"

It Didn't Work.

A man who lives far uptown in New York is not sure whether the joke is on him or on his wife. Here is how he tells it:
"One night last week I thought I heard some one prowling about the house, and as there have been a number of houses broken into lately I concluded that the noise was made by burglars. As I sat up in bed listening I chanced to glance into the next room, the door of our bedroom being open, and there, sure enough, stood a burglar coolly examining our silver plate. With this startling discovery came the chilling thought that I hadn't such a thing as a firearm in the house. But I determined to see what bluff would do, so, turning to my wife, I said in a loud voice:
"Mary, where's my revolver?"
"John," she answered in a voice equally as loud, "there isn't such a thing in the house, and you know it."
"After that I closed and locked the door and blew a police whistle."

The Ruling Passion.

"An old Irishwoman, in describing a 'gone but not forgotten,' said: 'Mike was the fine man entirety, and he'd be living now if it wasn't for the drink. He had a dog, and sure that baste would bring him home from the saloon when he was so blind wid liquor he couldn't see a step before him. And when he died—'tis the truth I'm shpaking—his ghost walked at night, back and fourth, betune the saloon and his house, and bedad 'twas so dhruunk his dog knew him'!"

A Difference in Time.

A traveler in Ireland, riding a horse that had seen better days, stopped on a country road in Donegal and asked a peasant:
"How far is it to Letterkenney?"
"Now, every true Irishman, gentle or simple, is a born sportsman and has a keen appreciation of the points of a good horse. So, after surveying the sorry steed with the eye of a connoisseur, the rustic replied slowly:
"That depends."
"How depends? Depends on what?" asked the traveler impatiently.
"Well," returned Pat in the same measured tones, "ye see, sor, wid a decent horse it's a matter av five or so; wid that quare baste av yours it's fully tin. But"—with a sudden burst of energy—"if it was wan av Major Doyle's blood mares ye'd be there now!"

Woman's World

SNOWSHOES FOR HORSES.

Mrs. George Westinghouse Provides Protection For Helpless Equines.

From the royal household of the king of Wurttemberg at Stuttgart there came recently a cable order for a full set of horse overshoes to be furnished for the stables of the king. The cable went to Pittsburg, the explanation being Mrs. George Westinghouse's interest in the horse overshoes. A representative of Mr. Westinghouse turned the message over to a manufacturer of these overshoes.

Mrs. Westinghouse some time ago gave to the Humane society of Pittsburg a supply of overshoes to keep horses from slipping on the ice and snow. A newspaper notice to this effect appears to have reached the king.

Mrs. Westinghouse is accredited with first having made the manufacture of the horse overshoe possible. She supplied funds for an inventor who had an idea for fastening chains under the frog of each horseshoe, giving the horse a rough hold on the ice of slippery streets. Mrs. George Westinghouse was before her marriage, which took place about a year ago, Miss Violet Brocklebank, the pretty daughter of Sir Thomas and Lady Brocklebank of Ireton Hall, Cumberland, England. The meeting of the young couple was very romantic, taking place in the machine shops of the great Westinghouse works. Miss Brocklebank and her mother while visiting friends in Pittsburg one day went through the shops with young George Westinghouse, who was working as a day laborer in his father's establishment, as their guide. To quote Miss Violet, he was "perfectly stunning in his overalls." At the time the English visitors had no idea that their guide was the son of the great inventor. Several months later George Westinghouse went to England and became one of a week end party at Ireton Hall. It was then that Miss Brocklebank found out that the "stunning man" at the Pittsburg machine shop and the rich Mr. Westinghouse were one and the same person. Not many months elapsed after the meeting before the manor house saw a fine old fashioned country wedding, and you may easily guess who was the bride. A sister of Mrs. Westinghouse is one of the most famous woman whips in England. And it was she who drove Mr. and Mrs. Westinghouse in a four-in-hand to the station, six miles distant from Ireton Hall, when they started on their honeymoon.

you are enjoying the comfort that your deck chair affords, but for protection against the winds when you are taking your constitutional. On a pretty girl this hood, after the style of a monk's headgear, is very fetching.

Not to Be Called Plain.
There's one thing we will have to change if these ladies who wish to vote have their way," said Senator Borghum.

Milady's Mirror

Don't wear false hair, but if you must wear it use your own.

If you haven't any combs and must buy false hair, be sure to have it fumigated and disinfected before wearing it or you might meet with a fate similar to that of a young Chicago girl who supplemented her rather limited crown of glory with a very handsome and very expensive coronet braid. The young woman's hair—what she had of it—was quite black, and the braids which she purchased had the glossiness of a raven's wing and matched her hair to perfection. After she had worn it a short while she noticed a peculiar numbness in her head, or, rather, in her scalp. All sensation of feeling seemed to be lost, even to the extent of insensibility when pricked with a hatpin. This numbness soon spread to her shoulders, breast and arms.

Finally a physician was consulted, who pronounced the affliction a genuine case of leprosy. The family was at a loss to account for the manner in which the disease was contracted. After awhile, however, the false braid was thought of and its history investigated, when it was discovered that the hair had come from the head of a leprosy Chinaman and that the glossy black locks had been the means of conveying the disease. Despite the fact that the young woman's father was a man of wealth, she was taken to the leper colony in New York state.

Proportions of Beauty.
If a woman be five feet five inches in height her extended arms should measure from tip of middle finger just five feet five inches, exactly her own height. A woman of this height should measure twenty-four inches round the waist and thirty-four inches around the bust.

The upper arm should measure thirteen inches and the wrist six. The calf of the leg should measure fourteen and a half inches, the thigh twenty-five and the ankle eight. From her thighs to the ground she should measure just what she measures from the thighs to the top of the head.

The distance from the elbow to the middle finger should be the same as the distance from the elbow to the middle of the chest.

From the top of the head to the chin should be just the same length as the foot, and there should be the same distance between the chin and the armpits.

The length of her hand should be just one-tenth of her height and her feet just a seventh and the diameter of her chest a fifth.

"Goose Walking" the Latest.
"Goose walking" develops the muscles of the legs and exercises those of the abdomen. Raise one knee as high as possible, stretch out the lower leg straight in front with toe pointed and place it on the ground. This is done with each foot alternately to three counts. For a vigorous exercise to stimulate the whole body extend the arms out to the side in a straight line from the shoulder. Keeping the arm stiff, move it around in a small circle rapidly and put as much strength into the exercise as possible. Simple as it may sound, it is really very strenuous and should not be continued too long. Exercising should be taken only where there is an abundance of fresh air. If done at home, throw all the windows up, though the thermometer be at zero.

To Beautify the Eyes.
Judiciously apply a little "makeup" to heighten the effect of size or brilliancy.
Rub the eyebrows upward with the finger tips, as do the women of southern Spain, in order to give an effect of piquancy.

Arrange the hair so that the expression of the eyes may be heightened.
Have the beauty doctor furnish the eye with a long and sweeping set of lashes.
Stimulate the growth of the lashes.

To Make Rouge.
A good rouge is made by mixing a quarter of a dram of powdered carmine with one ounce of French chalk powdered. When these two are blended they are slowly worked into half a dram of oil of almonds. This requires much time and patience, for the mixture must be even. Lumps are pressed through coarse muslin, repeating this until none is left.

For Good Looking Eyebrows.
A drop of almond oil, warmed, put on the eyebrows with a fine brush will make them more lustrous and generally look better. This may be done during the day, and there will be no appearance of greasiness by warming the oil, thus thinning it, so a small quantity works better than a larger one.

Cure For Double Chin.
A double chin, they say, can be removed by rubbing the neck vigorously with the closed fist and applying a great deal of ice cold water.

DALEY'S BUCKWHEAT MAKES THE CAKE.
In the chilly days of autumn, When the frost is on the ground, Or in cold and dreary winter When the snow lies all around, There's an article of diet That we're mighty glad to take, A delicious toothsome viand, That is called the buckwheat cake. When the buckwheat's on the griddle How impatiently we wait, Through the time that's intervening Ere the cake gets on the plate; Then the butter or the honey Or molasses soon is spread, And the world of demerol On that cake goes right ahead. Just as one is disappearing There's another takes its place, And a smile of satisfaction Spreads across the eater's face. Soon again the plate is empty, But 'tis only brief delay, For the cakes just keep on coming, Till enough are stowed away. All in vain is indignation To the buckwheat eater preached, For the cakes, hot from the griddle, Have the right spot always reached; Whether early in the morning, Or at noon or even night, They are always warmly welcomed And they soothe the appetite. Just when buckwheat was discovered Even a fact we do not know, But we're told it was a viand Several centuries ago, John Daley's Buckwheat flour is pure You can get it at Sechler's store, And when you have used one sack You'll be sure to go back for more.

From California.
It is to laugh, when I read from all over the eastern states of the severe weather you are having in the East, we in Los Angeles, Cal., are enjoying everything that is good and beautiful. As far as the eye will carry, everything is green, flowers of all kinds blooming, birds singing from all the trees, and the sun shines beautifully all day long the ranchmen and gardeners are busy with the crops and vegetables. Yes, vegetables of all kinds, potatoes in blossom, the trees are full of oranges and lemons. These trees have the blossom, green fruit and ripe fruit on at the same time. Geraniums grow to the height of from seven to nine feet. I wish you could all live in such a climate as Los Angeles, Cal. It is no wonder the western people are well to do people, when they can raise crops the year around. We can go to the snow, although it can not come to us; we can take an electric car, and in one hour be on the top of the mountains. Mt. Wilson, where there is all the snow any one could wish for. I made the trip once this winter as my children wanted to see the snow, but they are satisfied to do without it if they can be dressed in summer clothes and eat ice cream and live out of doors all day long. The West, I find to be an unusually progressive country. The Eastern schools are ahead both in the educational work and buildings. But after all is said I would not like to exchange places with anyone in the East. I would like to visit there some day, but not to stay. I have no relatives here, but you do not need them here, as everyone is your friend. To my friends in Milesburg and Unionville I would say I only wish you could all enjoy the California climate instead of your cold weather, while you are freezing we can feel the sweat of ones brow. To the Supt. of the Milesburg Sunday school would say I have not as yet come across one as good as he is.

An Old Fashioned Winter.
"An old fashioned winter" is the way all around. Yes, it is an old fashioned one, and how willingly—might say warmly—we greet it, as we would the coming of an old friend many years absent and whom we had put down as among the departed ones to memory time ago. The return of the old fashioned winter how it creates a desire for the ways and manner of doing things as in the years of the old fashioned winter! Pity it is we could not have a return of more—many more—of the old fashioned men and women of the days of olden ago. We do not have the old fashioned young men and women any more. The old fashioned boys were raised to be industrious, fit for the farm and workshop, and the maidens trained for the all-important position of housewife and mother, the adornment of a happy home in every requisite. The first named are, to a too large extent, crazed with football, business qualifications scorned. The second are, to a large extent, devoted to street gadding, fashion and frivolity, with not the least qualification for the high mission for which the Creator has intended them. There are some exceptions in both classes, but they shine in the minority.

A Twelve Inch Snow.
Friday afternoon it began to snow and kept up more or less until next morning, and whilst folks were busy shoveling on terra firma to get rid of it, why the shoveling from overhead seemed to be going on as lively as ever, and by Saturday morning on the level there was depth of twelve inches and a threat of more coming. There being a considerable body of ice, snows yet on the surface, and with a shell of two to three inches of cold, a sudden thaw would be disastrous along all streams with a flood of waters greater in volume than any previous flood. May it not result thus will accord with the wishes of all. The shovel brigade rarely has so rich a harvest.

There is one notable fact with this snow—we observe it was of a uniform depth in all parts of the state, being twelve inches; it is a rare incident.

Dan Cupid Busy.
That the Tyrone school board will have, at the close of the present school term a question even more serious than that of the much talked of high school building, is just coming to light, says the Herald. This new problem—that is startling in the extreme is how to prevent their teachers from dodging cupid's dart as no less than nine teachers out of the force of about 21, are engaged to be married before another term begins.

Two Ways of Doing

In days ago, a builder dealt with a dozen different supply houses. He bought his brick and stone here, lumber there, glass elsewhere, and nails and bolts round the corner. A building that didn't "jibe" was the usual result, but no one person could be blamed for it or held responsible.
In THESE days Mr. Builder does it differently. He makes his own orders everything from one comestee supply house, and when the material comes, IT SUITS.
And you are here now, today, with the B. L. Co.—not yesterday with the dozen.
