

FRANCIS SPEER'S Breezy "That" Column

That the weather and the liver has much to do with the success of some men in Bellefonte.

That the easiest way some fellows in Bellefonte can get in trouble is to tell their wives how mother did it.

That the reason "Reddy" Lane, of Bellefonte, has been so funny of late is that he has been sleeping under a crazy quilt.

That Pat. Cherrity, one of the best poor Overseers Bellefonte has had for years, says that going into politics is like climbing a greasy pole.

That they say a man in Milesburg wants a divorce because his wife don't want him to leave her in the house.

That there is a woman in the West ward of Bellefonte who wants to know how to keep her husband from falling out of bed. Make him sleep on the floor.

That Joe Katz, the enterprising merchant of Lewistown, says you can't take one on Friday, March 10th, for another who beats the "devil" how business keeps up.

That it is said that Bellefonte has in it a doctor who claims that love is only a temporary derangement of the nervous system. But there's an old-fashioned remedy for it—marriage.

That on Friday evening a young married man in Bellefonte, while attending the Brush entertainment in Petriken Hall, was put in a sweat box, all right. It was worse than taking a Turkish bath.

That James Saylor, the devil at the Republican office, says they are going to move the fish hatchery to Phillipsburg so that the brewery out there can get the hops. "Jim" must have been eating razor soup.

That a very pretty little girl, on Linn street, Bellefonte, asked her mamma, "where does the fire go when it goes out?" "Goodness knows, my dear, you might just as well ask me where your papa goes when he goes out."

That what a certain woman in Bellefonte wants to do is to treat her husband about half white and the other half black in the evening or remain at home altogether. She can't bring peace by giving her husband a lemon when she could just as well hand him an orange.

That Brush, the musician, on Friday night, while doing his thing, said that if he couldn't take good fish from a Bellefonte audience he was sure to catch some suckers. How he was able to figure that out was about as mysterious as some of the other tricks he did.

That there are two hundred and fifty thousand words in the English language, and the majority of them were used last Sunday by a Bellefonte lady when, after coming out of church, she discovered that her new hat was adorned with a tail which was written, "reduced to $7.75."

That it is said that "Mitch" Cunningham, the genial proprietor of the Haag Hotel, Bellefonte, took a guest into his dining room the other day and asked him what side of the table he preferred to sit on. The stranger replied that he was from Missouri and preferred to sit on a chair.

That in eternity some people in Bellefonte will curse those whom they loved here. A saint can't follow in the footsteps of a degenerate here, on earth, and expect to sit in heavenly places in the other world. Not any more than a rose can bloom on a thorn bush. No, they won't see.

That one distinctive feature about Bellefonte is that the person with money can commit any social indiscretion and it is passed off as a huge joke, but vengeance is heaped on the less fortunate individual who violates the laws of proper decorum. It is said that "Money Makes the Mare Go," and it's true.

That some young men in Bellefonte, before they were married, dressed so tastefully and prim that to see them on the street you would imagine that they just came out of a bandbox. It's different now. If they have a blue flannel shirt and a pair of gun boots to wear they think they are mighty lucky. That's what a man gets for hunting trouble.

That some parents in Bellefonte are making fools out of their daughters by scimping some of the necessities of the household in order to dress their daughters up to take the queen's taste. While it is true they are very anxious to have their daughters marry well yet very often the dress attracts some worthless cuss who doesn't amount to a tinker.

That if reports from Philadelphia are correct there was a young man from Bellefonte in that city the other week who had such a beautiful jag on that he had to be taken off the street in order to save his friend here the humiliation of hearing that he had been run in the police court. It is difficult to tell what other dirty indiscretion he had been practicing. He's a bird.

That it is said that the night of the Bellefonte High School fraternity dance Trude Parker and Horace Hartman had a quarrel. He took the same young lady, and they were in one dickens of a stew about it. Finally Brigadier Hartman stole a march on Colonel Parker by getting another fellow to interested for him. The strategy worked like a charm and Hartman gained the day. Moral—why a man is up against the real thing he should never let any grass grow under his feet.

That just now the different circles of society in Bellefonte are discussing a scandal in which a married man and a single girl are implicated. If the reports that are coming in are true there is a great injustice being done to the young lady in question. However, if they are true then the gentleman should be taught a lesson that he will remember the balance of his days. Bellefonte has entirely too many loose men, morally, who are untrue to their wives and families and all of them deserve to be shown up.

That the good, christian ladies of the town ought to go together and raise enough money to place a first class pool table in the Y. M. C. A. which is not a church but a place where the young men can find amusements surrounded by the best of influences. The ladies in the other towns and cities are beginning to see the point and why should the women in the town of Bellefonte be behind the times? If a preacher had a pool table in his house where would he be the harm any more than if he had other games? No, you will not lead a young man to perdition through a pool table in the Y. M. C. A. but you will lead him to perdition if you make him a better man.

OVER THE COUNTY.

The herd of Holstein cattle on exhibition at the last county fair by A. C. Shifer, of Lewisburg, will be sold at public sale on Friday, March 10th.

A yearling colt at the public sale of John B. White, near Penn Cave, sold for $134. It was a very fine animal, and was purchased by B. Gardner Grove, who expects to rear it for a brood mare. The mother of the colt, ten years old, sold for nearly $275.

Miss Laura Runkle, of Centre Hall, is paying a visit to her uncle, John W. Runkle and family, at Middleburg, and other friends in that section.

The taking of the census begins April 15th, and persons should be ready to answer all questions by that time.

Special attention is called to the farm sale of M. T. Hazel, near Bellefonte, on next Wednesday, March 16th. A fine line of horses and cattle, and a full line of modern farm implements will be sold. Mr. Hazel will have a big sale because his stock and goods are the best.

Prof. P. H. Meyer is making an effort to organize an orchestra from young musicians in Centre Hall, with himself as a leader. He has thus far succeeded in inducing Gross R. Allison, Floyd E. Snyder, Robert C. Meyer, Misses Mabel Arney, Bertha Strohmeyer and Lella Huyett to join in the movement.

Dr. William Frear, a professor at State College, has petitioned Judge Ellis L. Orvis to have his recent election as borough auditor set aside, as his present term of office does not expire until December 1913. As the Republican party erred in placing his name on the ballots, he declines to serve beyond his present term.

Cupid seems to be doing a great business in our town of late, and again we hear the music of the marriage bells. Boys, be on your guard.

Three Moose Run sports have been seen every day for the past week, driving through our town. One of the young men in particular, we will call the "wool pedler," who sings "There's a Girl There," while the others smile and say, "yes, and a boomstick too."

Ma Reese, a P. R. R. fireman, of Tyrone, was seen on our streets on Sunday evening.

Fifty Years of Happiness. Fifty years of married life was observed on the 3rd of March by Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Kryder, of Freeport. Mr. Jacob Kryder was born in Centre county, Pa., April 8, 1825, going west with his parents, John Kryder and wife, in 1847. They located in Lancaster township and were highly successful, giving up the farm many years ago to their children. The mother died in Freeport in 1863 and the father passed away twenty-three years ago. Jacob Kryder has two brothers, Joseph and Andrew, who live at Juda, Wis.—Bulletin.

Hale and Hearty Octogenarian. We had a pleasant caller the other day, in John Lowry Rodgers, accompanied by his son, both of Nitanny. Our venerable friend now backs in his eighty-third year, and is the picture of health and strength, enjoyed by the aged patriarch all his lifetime. He is a native of Walker township, and for fifty years wound the blacksmith anvil at Nitanny. His health has been such—and is yet—that he may climb to the hundredth rung of life's ladder. He was a most successful and esteemed citizen during his long lease of life.

Fruit Growers' Meeting. The third meeting of Centre county Fruit Growers' Association will be held at Rebersburg, on the 18th and 19th of March 1910. Two sessions will be held; one on Friday evening at 7 o'clock, and Saturday morning at 9:30 o'clock. Prof. J. P. Stewart, from Pa. State College, will be the principal speaker, followed by some home talent. Cyrus Brungart, President.

State College Admitted. Pennsylvania State College was admitted to membership in the Intercollegiate Athletic Association by a unanimous vote. Penn State is now placed on an equal footing with the biggest colleges in the country in this old and honored organization. It is an advantage to belong to it, especially for track men.

ABOUT WELL DRILLING.

The artesian or drilled well depends upon water which falls as rain and snow and soaks down to where the earth's crust becomes so dense that unless there be very hard and porous rock the water cannot penetrate it. Therefore, the greater supply of water will be found in less than five hundred feet, below average surface level. Owing to their open and porous nature the largest supply of water is found in hard rock.

I have now drilled a few wells in different sections of Centre county and have found that the average well, for domestic use, is less than two hundred feet deep, and the underlying strata about the same nature. Therefore, I am confident that a good drilled well is cheaper than a cistern, there being no repairing or water hauling, as a good drilled well will supply an abundance of pure water out of nature's own filter. The temperature of from thirty-four to fifty degrees Fahrenheit, during four seasons of the year. Neither need we be afraid of disease-generating germs, such as we find almost daily in water from cisterns and dug wells.

It is only for the last century that the people are being aroused and enlightened as to the benefits derived from a pure water supply obtained from the drilled well. By the perseverance and experience of good honest men it has been proved that the artesian well is the purest, cheapest, most substantial, and best water supply unless provided by nature in the form of a spring which flows from rock or sand and gravel beds. A stream that goes dry is only a wet weather stream, and brings traces of objectionable chemical properties, or, in other words, a germ breeder. I have twelve years' experience in drilling water wells, and I claim that I can drill a well to perfection. For this reason I can guarantee satisfaction, and drill cheaper than inexperienced men. Interested parties will do well to call on me at any time, and get my prices. We also supply pumps and water supplies at reasonable prices. We will be glad to have you call and see our work. We have just completed a well for E. B. Rann, who lives three miles west of State College. It is 178 feet deep which supplies 20 gallons of water per minute.

Yours truly, E. L. SHIFFER, Artesian well driller.
