AN ABUNDANT CROP.

The Festive Huckleberry and Jolly Picnickers.

The welcome huckleberry has been on deck some three weeks and in large quantities has made its appearance at the curb market at from eight to ten cents per quart. It is the early berry that comes in at this period. It grows ipon plants of from three to six inches height which stand as closely together as hair upon a dog's back and in patches in the open mountain sides and districts from a quarter to several Harvey Robb, of Lock Haven, trans-acted business with the merchants make the patches look blue with the for instructions will leave for able flavor. Strings of teams to the number of ten to twenty can be seen going to a berry outing in a mountain section, starting at early morn, scatter over acres, and their jolly yells can be heard right and left, fore and aft. With well laden vessels the pickers return to their homes to reach same for bedtime. Oft parties will camp two or more days and have a good time, and even during their stay the lady contingent will "do up" the berries ready for use throughout the year, in the various ways needed in the home. Districts that have been run over by mountain fires, on the flats, are where the largest crop of berries is produced and the effect of the fires in this behalf lasts over quite a number of years as berry fields. The huckleberry season is one for pleasure and profit, and pans out better than fishing-camping in covered wagons or through to keep dry.

There is another huckleberry that is rare, and grows "on trees," or bushes, if you please, from twenty to thirty feet in height. It is known as the Bear Meadow huckleberry, is a slight bit larger than the common berry, has a pleasent terrish flavor and soft a pleasant tartish flavor and soft whiteish seed. There are few sections of country, other than above, known to have this delicious huckleberry, that grows upon trees. The trees grow in clumps of slender stalks, pliable, and stems 15 to 20 as long as a fishing rod, which are laden with the most delicious berries, and can be gathered with ease by pulling down the rods to where you sit, and thus gather quart after quart in a short time. The Bear Meadows is a delightful mountain table land, somewhat swampy, and some four miles west of Boalsburg—covering a section several thousand acres in extent.

Barred in Hutchinson. Because of an article by Theodore Roosevelt in the Outlook, the last issue of The Outlook has been barred from sale in Hutchinson, Kansas. The magazine comes under the ban of a recent ordinance which prohibited the exhibition of prize fight pic-tures and the sale of newspapers or magazines printing such pictures or printing stories of prize fights. It was never intended that the ordinance should place the Outlook in the same class as the Police Gazette, but under a strict interpretation of the ordinance any magazine which matter relating to prize fighting can be barred. The last issue of the Outlook contained a comment by Mr. Roosevelt on the Jeffries-Johnson fight, so it came under the provisions of the ordinance, even if the article did condemn prize fighting.
