PORT MATILDA.

One day last week one of our young men, Marion Bennett, had a very painful experience. He was loading plank, and in some way he got his one finger under some of the plank as they fell, and got it pinched. It took the skin and flesh off of the end of his finger leaving the end of the bone bare.

Bennett & Son, owners and operators of the cider mill in our town, stated that they intend to quit making cider after Thursday Nov. 17th. Hurry up there, all you people, and get your apples picked. They have made quite a lot of cider this year. It is very disagreeable job when cold weather comes, hence they wish to get through with it.

Some of our boys had their fun on Monday evening and paid for it afterward. Not so much fun when you are found out and have to fork over dough to cover damages. The boys had amused themselves by placing a cart belonging to J. S. Williams on the roof of Jacob Bigelow's saddle shop. In doing so they damaged the roofing. Mr. Bigelow found them out and demanded damages. This was a case of fun rebounding.

A "HOBBLE PLATFORM."

LaFollette's Magazine says: "The hobble skirt may be beautiful and modish. It may be artistic. It may be all that is pleasing to the eye; but of one thing we are quite sure—it is not built for speed. That's why it is called the hobble skirt. What else would you call a garment that fits so tightly about the knees that it permits only the shortest possible steps? Moving forward in a hobble skirt, even on level pavement, is a matter of much uncertainty and labor. As for going up hill or climbing steps—well, of course one may be carried. And that is true of all kinds of hobbles; they retard progress. Take the New York platform, for example. It's a hobble platform. Hobbled with the sophistry of the 'old guard.' Hobbled with a fulsome eulogy of the administration, with its Ballingers, its Wickershams and its Knoxes. Hobbled with unflattering praise of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law."

HOW TO GET HUSBANDS.

Young Women Should Cultivate Charm of Manner.

"The best possible way for a woman to attract her husband is to be charming. The great trouble with most women nowadays is that they profess to be manhaters, and as a consequence, they scare off many desirable husbands." With these sentences the Rev. Edmund Hez Swem advised the unmarried women of Washington—the eligible ones—the best road to the matrimonial mart.

He was discussing "How Washington Women Can Marry" before a congregation, which crowded the auditorium of Typographical Temple, on G street, northwest, last evening.

Only the other day the clergyman declared that a man of the highest position in Washington told him that he did not believe any single women of a marriageable age in the city were happy in their unmarried state.

"In substantiation of this I read," he said, "One Who Knows," saying 'nothing under heaven can compensate to a true woman for the loss of domestic ties, the love of husband and children.'"

Then the young women of Washington were advised to be beautiful if they could, and if they could not, then be "sweet faced." The minister also told them to be good, cheerful and unselfish.

"Men require more in their wives than women require in their husbands, and if the opposite were the case, there would be many men without wives."

He urged the young women to learn and teach mothers the art of home-making and to try to be home lovers, with plenty of courage and love and strength.

The Rev. Mr. Swem wants the young women to appreciate other men in their acquaintance, declaring that men like women who admire their own sex.
