

LEWIS AND CONNELLY TWO FAMOUS ROBBERS

babel of voices could not fail to attract the attention of the other spectators, who crowded the place, and while some were occupied in talking, and the rest engaged in listening admiration, laid hold of the bag with apparent carelessness, and thrusting it quickly into my bosom, left the room unnoticed, taking a French leave of the company.

I honestly showed my companions the whole amount of my valuable prize, and finding Melinda on my return in low spirits and much disheartened, I presented her with a piece of lace, which she refused to accept for a long time, and not until I succeeded in making her believe that I drew it as a prize in a lottery recently established to benefit a poor widow, whom misfortune in trade had obliged this transaction, to settle up the business of the preceding week, and on omitting to render an account of the lace, I had given my wife, I was accused of the majority coinciding with my accuser, high words ensued, and blows succeeding words, I.

A Quarrel Among Thieves. I was severely beaten, and my ungenerous companions threatened to lodge an information against me at the mayor's office. I suddenly fled, making arrangements according for leaving New York the next day.

I immediately communicated my determination to Melinda and she received the intelligence with evident marks of regret and disappointment. She was pleased with her situation in Pearl street, and having formed an intimacy with a few females in the neighborhood whose society she liked, she was unwilling to leave New York, or at least wished to remain there for some private reasons. She was affected on this occasion even to tears, but her tears were like an April shower, through which the sun soon broke, and dissipated every cloud of discontent, that hung upon her brow. Our household affairs did not require much time to prepare the necessary arrangements previous to a removal. In less than twelve hours our little stock of furniture was either packed up ready for transportation, or disposed of at private sale or given away as presents, or small keepsakes to our kind relatives on the evening.

Leaves New York. We crossed the river and proceeded for New Brunswick in the state of New Jersey, which I had selected as the place of our temporary residence—I could not help remarking the contrast between the scenes of Mother on this occasion and my conduct—she was so seriously distressed on leaving the place, that contained companions, who were equally worthy of one another, that she was afraid to trust herself with taking a formal leave, and came off without any salutation, whilst I was all anxiety to remove from the same town, that contained companions with whom I had associated from selfish views of interest and gain, but whose society I hated, and whose conduct in many instances, I secretly abhorred and farwishedly disapproved of. The whole number of banditti, to which I belonged, consisted of twenty-one including myself, and for the designations of our persons, when we held our secret meetings, it was agreed that each should assume some fictitious name or appellation. The name appropriated to my accuser was Bob Brimstone, and that applied to me was Harry Hurricane, and every one of us had some strange appellation affixed to him, just as a fancy, blasphemy, or some leading trait of character suggested. Bob was one of the most bold, daring and blood-thirsty villains I ever met with. Although I cannot say, I was one of those who looked upon human nature as so very depraved as to admit at all times and under all circumstances, of every species of vice, and crime in its most deformed shape, and exclude from the same bosom, or extinguish in it every spark of humanity, or degenerate feeling, yet truth obliged me to declare that this unhappy individual had less of the man, and more of the monster, than any of the human family I ever knew. Villany had marked him as his own, and it is to be feared there is not a vice, or a crime, that he had not perpetrated at some period of his life. I was particularly struck at his brutal conduct on an occasion, which came within my own knowledge, and for which, on account of my agency in preventing his horrible purpose, he swore one of the most terrible oaths of revenge, that ever fell from impious lips of blasphemy. It had been customary with the band to give their attendants at the theatre every night of performance to embrace every opportunity that afforded for plunder, robbery and pocket-picking.

We knew it was not usual for the merchants, and other inhabitants of the city to carry about their persons any large sums of money, except at the theatre, and other places of public amusement. Our chief dependence was on country merchants and strangers, who might happen to go there, the first night of their arrival in town, when owing to the fatigues of travel, they were in a peculiarly gawky curiosity, natural to persons who had few or no opportunities at home to gratify the love of novelty and pleasure, they were surprised into sleep, or lost in amazement at the new wonders that presented themselves to his astonished senses, in a variety of fantastic shapes so as to become easy objects of prey and innocent subjects of plunder—it happened, during a night of performance, on which we counted on great success, in consequence of a crowded house, on the first appearance of Cook, the celebrated English actor, in some new and interesting character, the whole band attended to a man. Our hopes were not disappointed—and Bob Brimstone, being more successful than the rest, maddened with joy at his good luck, became intoxicated with liquor towards the close of the entertainment.

On leaving the theatre he observed a young lady walking alone to and fro, in search of her little brother, who had accompanied her, and whom she had missed in the crowd, as they descended the steps of the vestibule. Having offered his assistance to find the lost boy, he succeeded in enticing her into an unfrequented dark alley, where no voice of distress could be heard. Having proceeded up the alley until he came to a place where an opening was formed by two large warehouses, which had been erected within three feet of each other, he seized her with ruffian violence, and dragged her almost half way through this gloomy passage, when he proceeded to stop her mouth by thrusting a handkerchief down her throat. The poor afflicted female uttered the most piercing shrieks that ever proceeded from the voice of despair, but all her cries would have been in vain, had not chance or rather an ever watchful Providence interposed by directing my steps and those of another of the gang to return home through this darksome passage. Hearing the cry of distress, we immediately ran to the spot from whence it came, and just arrived in time to rescue the young lady.

Having extricated the unfortunate female from the grasp of the monster, we immediately took her under our protection, and prepared to accompany her to Greenwich street, in which her parents resided. She continued in a state of terror and distress until we delivered her into the hands of her father, who invited us into the house, and overwhelmed us with the strongest impressions of gratitude, insisted on our partaking of some refreshments before we parted. I instantly took my departure home, and full of the most pleasing reflections at being the instrument of saving the young lady. I enjoyed a more sound and composed sleep that night, than I had done for many months before.

We did not reach New Brunswick until the third day. We continued to lodge at the stage house for about a week, when I rented a small tenant in the outskirts of the town, and having procured a few articles necessary for housekeeping, we moved in. In two weeks a daughter was added to our family, whom to please her, I agreed should be called Felina. This place being limited in population, and not affording many fruitful sources of either speculation or depredation, I was obliged to make my predatory excursions into the surrounding country for plunder and opportunities to assay my counterfeit money. Experience had taught me the necessity of prudence and caution, and I was proceeding with the utmost vigilance. Having learnt that there was a college at Princeton, and that most of the students were from the southward, I concluded that in a seminar so extensive and conspicuous there must be many empty heads and full purses, especially during the approaching Christmas holidays, when most of the students were in the habit of receiving large supplies of money to enable them to indulge in the various festivities of the season. As soon as Melinda was able to leave her room and attend to her domestic concerns, I set out in the first stage that offered for Princeton, and having assumed the character of a Georgia planter, I succeeded in introducing myself to the professors, and in order to further my schemes, I gave out that my object was to procure a berth in the college for my brother, whose arrival I expected immediately after the holidays. I sought every opportunity to court the society and gain the good opinion of the young men with whom I had contracted an acquaintance—

Visits Princeton College. passing for a man of fortune, singing a good song, and being able to crack jokes with my pockets well stored with the fruits of my victory. I carried a few of my Princeton adventures, without remarking the very improper conduct of parents and guardians, in furnishing youths at college with such liberal supplies of money, as is generally done.

No seminary can long flourish where such a practice is cherished; no system of discipline can reach the evil; and while the exertions of the master are defeated by the acts of the parents, the hopes of the parent are disappointed, and when he embraces his son on return from the college, he finds him often not only unimproved in his education but ruined in his health, and corrupted in his morals.

Wants to Be Sure He's Dead. The will of Henry Abbott, Sr., of Media, Pa., requires that he be kept in an open coffin for 49 days after his death and that it be viewed daily. If he is still dead after that period his remains may be buried.

WHAT CURES ECZEMA? We have had so many inquiries lately regarding Eczema and other skin diseases, that we are glad to make our answer public. After careful investigation we have found that a simple wash of Oil of Winigreen, as compounded in D. D. D., can be relied upon. We would not make this statement to our patrons, friends and neighbors unless we were sure of it—and although there are many so-called Eczema remedies sold, we ourselves unhesitatingly recommend D. D. D. Prescription.

Because—We know that it gives instant relief to that torturing itch. Because—D. D. D. starts the cure at the foundation of the trouble. Because—it cleanses, soothes and heals the skin. Because—it enables Nature to repair the ravages of the disease. Because—The records of ten years of complete cures of thousands of the most serious cases show that D. D. D. is today recognized as the absolutely reliable Eczema cure.

GOOD ROADS TRAIN GOING OVER STATE

WILL CARRY INSTRUCTORS AND A DISPLAY OF ROAD MATERIAL.

PA. R. R. AND STATE COLLEGE

Will be a New Movement to Educate the Public in Scientific Road Building—May Visit This Section Later—Evening Meetings.

Unique among the efforts of the Pennsylvania Railroad to encourage the good roads movement in the State of Pennsylvania will be the operation of a Good Roads Educational train beginning Wednesday and Thursday, January 25th and 26th, when lectures will be given in Harrisburg. This will be the first time any Eastern railroad has run a Good Roads Special.

The Good Roads train will be in charge of the Pennsylvania State College co-operating with the Roads Department of the National Government and the State Highway Department of Pennsylvania. The train, consisting of four cars, will be used for lecture purposes in villages and small towns along the lines of the Pennsylvania Railroad. One car will be fitted up with a lantern for the illustrations of the lectures. Another car will be used for exhibits showing models of several types of roads such as earth, sand, clay, gravel, and telford. This car will also contain a series of photographs and drawings for illustrating the different methods of drainage and kinds of construction required for service in road building, also a home made roller, drag, and sprinkling wagon. The exact cost and methods of construction of the roller and drag will be shown in detail.

The Pennsylvania Railroad has for some time been conducting a campaign in the interests of good roads. Literature has been disseminated and lectures have been given in a number of towns. The Company has announced its desire to do everything in its power to improve the roads radiating from its stations in order that they may be kept open during that winter months, thereby facilitating the movement of freight to and from the stations.

By the operation of this train the Railroad Company hopes to carry the gospel of road building into every section of the State. The train will stop in each township along the railroad where good roads meetings will have been previously advertised. Evening meetings will be held in theatres or court houses of the larger cities, while the exhibits will be open day and evening with experts in attendance to give explanations and answer questions.

The State's experts on good roads say that "the average cost per ton mile of hauling over the ordinary dirt roads of the country is twenty-five cents. It has also been proved that a very large saving can be made in this item at a comparatively small cost for proper drainage and preparation of the roads. As 92 per cent. of the roads of the United States are made of dirt, it is evident that an improvement in this direction is well worth consideration. In fact, careful calculations have shown that the country could be saved an actual expenditure of over $100,000,000, per year by the road building program now being conducted and suitably maintained."

In the lectures to be given on the Pennsylvania Railroad's Good Roads Special an item that will be emphasized dwelt upon is the necessity for and proper methods of maintaining roads after they have been constructed or improved. The State Department men say that many thousands of dollars are lost annually on account of failure to maintain roads, which cost large sums to build and which through neglect have rapidly deteriorated to a condition where they must be wholly rebuilt.

The Pennsylvania State College will have two experts on the train during the entire trip; the United States Government will send at least one of its best trained men, and the State Department of Highways of Pennsylvania will also be represented. Representing the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will be officers of the divisions over which the train will pass.

A Morning Thought. Let me today do something that shall take a little sadness from the world's best store, and may I be so favored as to make of joy's too scanty sum a little more. Let me not hurt by any selfish deed or thoughtless word, the heart of foe or friend, nor would I pass, unseeing, worthy need, or sin by anyone where I should defend. However meagre I be, my worldly wealth let me give something that shall aid my kind, a word of courage, or a thought of health, dropped as I pass for troubled hearts to find. Let me tonight look back across the span 'twixt dawn and dark, and to my conscience say—because of some good act to best or man—"The world is better that I lived today."

WANTS A TAME WIFE.

Disgusted because his pretty young wife, Mabel, has deserted him and their child for the third time, Daniel Bates, 23 years old, of Hartford, Conn., has sent a communication to newspapers saying that all efforts to find his wife having failed, he is "again in the market for another wife." Bates makes these requirements: "This time I want one who will stand without hitching, and won't follow the traces every month or so. Mabel has spurned my love three times. Three times she has packed her trunk and sallied forth in quest of adventure. Therefore, if some kind and companionable young woman who does not want to gad around all the time, wants a husband, just tell her that Dan Bates is available, and like Barks, 'is willin'."

Police of many nearby cities have spent much time looking for the errant Mabel. The prior time she ran away she was found in Anderson by a Hartford City man who knew her, and the discoverer got a reward of $5. This time Bates offers no reward.

Start Hog Vaccination.

The State Live Stock Sanitary Board has inaugurated a system of immunization which is to be put into operation this week. For some time past experiments have been conducted in various parts of the State where hog cholera has appeared and the results were excellent. The vaccinations were made in herds which have been affected, and between 1200 and 1500 were vaccinated and the reports showing decrease of cases after the operation. It is now planned to give the owners of hogs the benefit of such treatment under regulation of the board.

$3.50 Kidney Cures Weak Kidneys, Free

Relieves Urinary and Kidney Troubles, Backache, Straining, Swelling, Etc.

Stops Pain in the Bladder Kidneys and Back.

Wouldn't it be nice within a week or so to begin to say goodbye forever to the scalding, dribbling, straining, or too frequent passage of urine; the forehead and the back-of-the-head aches; the dizziness, the general weakness, the growing muscle weakness; spots before the eyes; yellow skin sallowness; swollen eyelids; or swollen legs; urinary troubles; short breath; sleeplessness and the despondency I have a recipe for these troubles that you can depend on, and if you want to make a quick recovery you ought to write and get a copy of it. Many a doctor would charge you $3.50 just for writing this prescription, but I have it and will be glad to send it to you entirely free. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, 3239 Mack Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send it to you in a plain envelope. As you will see when you get it, this recipe contains only pure, harmless remedies, but it has great healing and pain-removing power. It will quickly show its power once you use it, so I think you had better see what it is without delay. I will send you a copy free—you can use it and cure yourself at once.
