landlady and a stranger, the latter informing her that a wagon loaded with store goods belonging to Hammond and Fage, of Bellefonte, was expected shortly to pass. The animating intelli-gence raised our droping spirits, and to increase our ardor for plunder, McGuire, another of the gang, made his appearance at the door just as we were preparing to leave the house; af-fecting to treat one another as strang-ers, and dissembling our knowledge of him, and he of us, we took our depart. ers, and dissembling our knowledge of him, and he of us, we took our depart-ure, after giving him a secret signal known only to the frateraity. We had proceeded but a short distance before we were overtaken by our old companion, and having communicated to him the information we got at the tavern, we concluded upon making an-other bold push to retrieve our fallen other bold push to retrieve our fallen fortunes; to accomplish our views with more security, we concerted the plan of robbing the wagon in the Seven Mountains, and accordingly proceeded to execute our purpose proceeded to execute our purpose. The attempt was crowned with suc-cess, and the spoils divided between us. Elated with our good lack and inflamed with liquor, we made anoth-erattempt to rob the store of Mr. James Potter, of Penn's Valley, the next morning; but though we com-menced the operation before the break of day and had the advantage of being of day and had the advantage of being armed with rifles, we were unexpect-edly discovered, and dreading to en-counter Mr. Potter and his family, whom I knew to be a brave and resolute man, we decamped on the first man, notice, without making any resistance. truth

Strategy to be Used.

After this, McGuire was dispatched to Bellefonte to reconnoitre and seek out safe and suitable objects of plunder. Assuming the appearance of a gentleman, he was dressed in the best clothes we could furnish, and in this clothes we could furnish, and in this character entered one of the shops with the pretended view of purchasing store goods, while his chiof intention was to gain information and make his observation of the premises, particu-larly as to the manner of securing the store at night, and the vigilance of encelessness of the owner. On his recarelessness of the owner. On his re-turn we consulted together about til within a short distance of the Big the danger we might be exposed to Island. Here we put to shore, and in case of a failure and apprehension, wearled with carrying our stolen bur-and finding Governor Findley to grow dens, we burned a part of the goods and inding Governor Finder to great and his more unpopular every day, and his chances of success weaker and fewer, we were prevented by four from an spot, a discovery took place, which force, we resolved to attain by stratagem what we dreaded to effect by violence. A new scheme was adopted and character of a laborer to procure netts and the Driftwood branch, proemployment, and after gaining admittance into the family as a domestic, he was to carry on a socret cor-respondence with us, and as soon as to shoot at a mark, with some respondence with us, and as soon as the plot was ripe for action, intro-duce us into the store the first night the store-keeper might happen to be absent. But owing either to his im-prudence or the sagacity of the store-keeper he was suspected to be an im-poster and refused employment. Lashed by Guilty Conscience.

Lashed by Guilty Conscience. On the return of McGuire the news of his failure filled us with new terror. When we agreed to separate for a time when we agreed to separate for a time the full of the separate for a time when we agreed to separate for a time the second se the better to avoid detection and elude the officers of justice. For several ful alternative of being overpowered days I concealed myself in the most by numbers or shoot at them to save days I concealed myself in the most lonely place I could find in the vicin-ity of Beliefonte, and at night slept or rather lay in the woods under the most distressing feeling of alarm and connelly fired his, alming point blank most distressing feeling of alarm and Connelly fired his, alming point blank fear. The noise was sufficient to dis-turb me, and the dismal scream of the screech owl terrified my imagination with awful forebodings. One night, lags one night, ticular. The fire was quickly returnwith a will forebounds. One oak, my while I lay under a large oak, my thoughts were much engaged in med-itating upon the foriorn condition to itating upon the foriorn condition to which I had brought myself, by my escape were cut off, and actuated by inprudent and criminal conduct; sleep a false spirit of revenge, we uttered had forsaken my eye-lids, and my the most improper threats of de-waking attention was alive to every fiance, and called aloud for them to waking attention was allee to every fiance, and called aloud for them to fire away; discharging our guns at the same time. The fire was imme-tation and trembling: thus I spent the night, anxious for the return of morn-night, anxious for the return of mornnight, and vainly expecting that the light of day, while it would dissipate the the darkness that overspread the earth, might also remove the deep gloom that pervaded my mind. Alas, the sun shines only for the innocent and the happy; and those who are not innocent and free from guilt, can no more expect to find happiness either ing the left side and diffet penetratin this world or in that to come than they can look for sunshine in the thigh. midst of night, without disappoint-ment. During the night I had heard a ment. During the night I had heard a Having dressed our wounds with all the skill and care they were capable of a horse-whip, and my mind dweiling on the recent circumstance of the ang on the recent circumsuntains, the robery in the Seven Mountains, the alarm of conscience induced me to ard of July, landed near the Big Isalarm of conscience induced me to imagine that the noise proceeded from the whip of the plundered wagoner, who had come in pursuit of me—I jumped up and stood upon my feet, expecting every moment to see the wagoner in person, and feel the lash of his from medical aid, and no comfort from The moon shed out dim light through the thick foliage of the wood, obscuring my vision and preventing me from seeing with distinctness, even the nearest objects. I saw no human figure, heard no human voice and concluded that the noise was nothing but the unreal creation of a disturbed imagination; after walking about for a few minutes I returned to my resting place under the oak, and lay under its branches until the day dawned, when Lawoke from a disturbed sleep of not more than half an hour's dura-The first noise that saluted my ears was a repetition of the same sounds I had heard during the night; and again the poor wagoner appeared in full view to the eyes of my at-frighted fancy; but the terror of fancy can never equal the horror of reality. Instead of the wagoner and his whip, I perceived one of the most terrific objects that ever appalled the human jects that ever appalled the human and who has promised to remain the night. A tremendous snake with two heads, lay within five feet of where I was, alternately jumping up from the ground, twisting and colling itself, and at intervals lashing its tall against the trunk of a hickory sapling. It ceased to move for an instant, and darted at me the angry look of a swollen and distended eye. Horror transfixed me to the spot as fast as the oak near which I stood. Super-happy case may be useful not only to the oak near which I stood. Super-stition, like fear, generally accom-panies guilt, and I now believed the serpentine monster before me, was nothing less than the Devil, who had left the infernal abyss, and re-appear-ed in the same form he had assumed when he tempted and deceived our frail parent in the garden of Eden. The design of his visit I considered to be for no other purpose than to car-ry me off with him to the lower re-gions, body and soul, as a just punish-ment for my manifold transgressions, and every other fear was swallowed up instantly devoured by the two-headed monster. Notwithstanding the vio-lence of terror which I now suffered, the impulse of self-preservation and the love of life restored me to a degree to recollection and composure sufficient to enable me to fly from the impending danger. I immediately as-sumed a desperate courage, and snatching up my rifle, fled with the utmost velocity the feet of man are suffering the same effects from an affrighted imagination, which I experienced from recent scenes of terror and horror. Alas! the only little happiness I ever tasted was in the bosom of my family, and in the society of my wife. When, after a guilty round of dissipation and crime, I have returned to the little room that contained my beloved Melinda, the calm abode of humble virtue, and found her engaged in the concerns of domestic industry; when I have entered by surprise and perceived her, unseen, sitting at the wheel, and heard her sing the old song of "Bess and her Spinning Wheel," I have been overpowered with feelings of delight, and shed tears of joy.

Connelly Dies From Wound.

of, the party who took us purchased a cance, and proposed to move us down the river, and on Sunday, the companion, receiving no assistance the ministerial offices of religion, died that night in gloomy sullenness. Peace to his ashes; though the period allowed for repentance was short, may the mercy of God be greater than his repentance, and forgive all his sins and crimes.

I was removed to this place as soon as my wound permitted, and with as much tenderness and humanity as the nature of the case allowed

I have now brought the history of my adventures to a close, having given as faithful a relation of the more important incidents of my life as my memory enabled me to recollect, in my present distracted state of mind and suffering condition of bodily pain. I have been thus particular, to gratify the wishes of a near and dear friend, who has always taken the greatest interest in my fate, and attended me frequently in my illness, and who has promised to remain the gentlemen generally; and to Sheriff Mitchell, and his excellent lady should be most ungrateful indeed if did not express my thanks for the many kind offices of humanity and benevolence they continued to bestow on me from the first day of my lodgment in jail. The jailor and his family have been equally kind and good; and I die at peace with all men.

I sincerely forgive my captors for being the instruments of my death. Acting under the authority of the law, they performed only their duty as good citizens, and have set an example worthy of imitation, in risking their own lives to save society, and liberate the country from the depredations and terrors of a desperate band of robbers, counterfeiters and outlaws.

To the amiable minister who visited me in jail, and prayed for me and with me, when I lay on my miserable allet. looking with fear and trembling in awful suspense, for the approach of death, I return the unfelgned thanks of an oppressed sinner, for his fre-quent intercessions at the "Throne of Grace' in my behalf. And you my friend, who have promised to remain with me, and close my eyes, accept my grateful acknowledgement for all you have done for me, and when you have seen me laid with decency in the grave bear to my mother, the last token of remembrance, she will ever receive from her dying son, a small lock of her hair, cut with his own hand from the head of the unfortunate but repentant, DAVID LEWIS, Bellefonte Jall, 12th July, 1820.
