A GOOD MOVE.

Whereas it is a conceded fact that no school can stand still. It must find a way to go back, and if it cannot stand still, if they cease to grow and gather information, to add daily to their fund of knowledge, to be drawn upon while imparting instruction the school ceases to go forward. If on the other hand, the teachers strive to continually gain knowledge, adding new truths, obtain and impart new ideas the school never ceases to grow better and the work more perfectly done.

Whereas there is now established and maintained a most excellent summer school at Pennsylvania State College with a corps of able and practical instructors, and a number of courses of study specially arranged and adapted to and for public school teachers of all grades, and whereas it is now and had been the practice of the board of directors of this district for a long number of years to reappoint all teachers who faithfully and honestly do their duty and they are thus reasonably certain of being retained from year to year, it is of necessity a strong inducement for teachers to study and seek every opportunity for study, instruction and improvement.

Now therefore resolved that it is the sense of the board of school directors that the teachers now engaged in teaching in the public schools of the borough should welcome the advantages afforded by a good summer school, and be accorded with full corps of able, practical and competent instructors in all departments, and be in attendance thereon during the entire term of the school for 1911.

Second, that the principal with authority may wish to accustom any him shall give notice of the desire of the board, to all the teachers of the schools of this preamble and resolution.

The above preamble and resolution were unanimously adopted by the School Board of the borough at an adjourned meeting held on the 21st inst. This is a move in the right direction and augurs well of the enterprise of the board, and it is to be hoped that the spirit and purpose of the resolution will be readily acquiesced in and speedily met by the teachers of our school.

All agree that we have as good a corps of teachers as can well be secured, and it is to be hoped that they wish to keep up with the progression, to every few years attend upon a good summer school for a full session. By so doing they obtain new ideas, and theories and are driven out of old ruts. Some of the teachers have not been to school of the kind referred to in the resolutions for 20 years, others never. It is well known that the teachers in our schools are retained year after year; this is to their credit, but they should realize that if it is to be continued they should with much pleasure take advantage of the opportunity afforded to attend a summer school under able instructors at a great college so near their home. This is an opportunity no teacher can afford to miss. No good teacher will miss it.

Beheaded by His Train. The following is taken from the Reading Telegram, relative of the accidental death of Adam J. Epp, whose wife, Miss Daisy Rhoads, formerly resided in Bellefonte. Jolted from his engine by the sudden breaking of the train Adam J. Epp, a P. & R. engineer, fell under the wheels of the first car, at Palmyra, Sunday afternoon and was instantly killed. The stop was caused by the bursting of an air hose. Epp was on the running board oiling the wheels as the freight approached Palmyra. His head was cut off, his right arm was broken, his shoulders crushed and his chest was bruised. He was about 35 years of age and a Spanish-American war veteran. Beside his wife and father, four children survive.

Oh, You Heroes! One of the boy books on the market just at present by a writer for boys has a consumptive lad of 17 light and whip a hardened man of 30. Then he goes through a Western blizzard without getting an ear frost bitten. Then he takes charge of a thousand sheep, rides a wild horse, throws the lasso and stops a herd of a thousand steers from stampeding. Then he finds a gold mine, buys a ranch, and with 20 men at his back he fights and wins a victory over 200. As a wind-up, the consumptive youth finds that he never had consumption, and comes out a million dollars ahead of the game. Any boy in the land would better put in his time robbing orchards than to read such stuff and nonsense, and parents who buy such books for their sons deserve to be sent to jail.—Grit.
