FACT, FUN AND FANCY. Bright, Sparkling Paragraphs-Selected and Original.

In drowning trouble, a man too often slips in himself. There is such a thing as getting there too early for the worm. We are not yet near enough Heaven to try making it in two jumps! Tombstones have no conscience and tell their tales without blushing. Look out for the man who has buried his conscience and his first wife! We cannot all get rich quickly. In fact, some of us cannot get rich at all. A jury is a body of twelve men that decides which lawyer is the smarter. No man is expected to be a good conversationalist while his wife is around. Every pump has its sucker-and almost every town pump has two or three* Love may be blind, but the groom's family has eyes enough to suit the bride. It takes a wise man to tell whether the world is laughing with him or at him. A Colorado newspaper says, "His uncle died with a cancer on his mother's side. Praising a woman's pie is all right, but what she wants is a man who will eat it! When riches comes in at the door, friends begin to show signs of staying to tea.

Elastic courtesy is . what a man pays for his suspenders, and a woman-but enuf sed

A woman will leap upon a chair and scream at sight of a mouse yet at the same time have a rat in her hair.

Swell When Wet.—Mrs. Brown laid aside the paper she was reading and said to Mr. Brown: "It says here that a nautical mile is 6,080 feet, and a statute mile is only 5,280 feet. Why is that? I though a mile was a mile." "Well, you see," explained Brown, "a mile is a mile, but a statute mile is measured on dry land, while a nautical mile is measured in the water, and you know most things swell when in water." "Why, of course," replied Mrs. Brown, as she picked up her paper again, "how stupid of me,"

Johnnie Misunderstood.—A lady took her small son to church for the first time and of coure he was interested in the sermon. When the preacher came in he ask-ed his mother why the man preached in his bathrobe. "Hush, Johnnie, he has on his robe." Just then the preacher announced they would sing, "The Consecrated Cross I Bear." The little boy jumped up in his seat and exclaimed, "Mamma, I want to see the cross-eyed bear."

Something to Think Over .- When a lady living in a small village sent .to the city, a distance of 20 miles away, for a doctor, she apologized for asking him to ccome such a distance. "Don't speak of it," answered the M. D. "I happened to have another patient in the neighborhood, and can thus kill two birds with one

A Starved Lion.—Every Sunday afternoon Robert's mother would take him on her lap and show him pictures in his Bible for little folks, at the same time ex-plaining them to him. One Sunday the picture happened to be martyrus thrown to the lions. She explained very solemnly to him the picture, trying to make him feel what a terrible thing it was. Robert's at very still, then all of a sudden exclaimed, "Mamma, oh, mamma! just look at that poor little lion way behind there; he won't get any." get any.

Enough for Them.—Two men who were from different states were sitting in a railroad station taking about their iand and the weather. Finally one said: "Well, my friend, I can tell you that there is some heavy fog where I live." And he went on and said, "One foggy morning, when I went out to feed the horses and pigs I as some crows on the fence, so I went and got a hay fork and threw it at them, and that hay fork stuck right in the fog, so that I could hardly pull it out again. I tell you that fog is thick enough for me where I live." The other man said that they do not have very heavy fog where he lived. "But," he said, "we have got some strong winds. One windy morning, when I went out to milk, I came to the place where the cows were, just in time to see the wind blow the hip off from one cow and at the same time it blew all the milk out of the other cow's udder, and right into my milk pail. And now, my friend," he said, "do you not think it is windy enough where I live?" "Yes," said the other with a grunt.
