GEORGE V. CROWNED KING OF ENGLAND

CORONATION CEREMONY TOOK PLACE IN LONDON, THURSDAY.

7.000 HISTORIC ABBEY IN

Nearly 100,000 Soldiers Lined the Thoroughfares-Many Americans Were and Magnificence.

George V. is now the crowned King of England. The formal ceremony of de-claring him the head of all British subjects took place in London on Thursday afternoon last at 12:37 o'clock.

To the orthodoxly-minded the ceremony was an awe-inspiring display of the pomp of militarism, of ecclesiastical solemnity and of medieval magnificence. To the cynic it was an almost pathetically childish exhibition of delight in tinsel and spangles. The radical saw in it a positively wicked waste of millions, in a country where fully one-third of the population is on the brink of pauperization and one-twentieth is literally stary-The average Briton is strictly oring. thodox, however. Before dawn the people began swarming by hundreds of thousands into the streets through which the royal procession was to pass, be-tween Buckingham palace and Westminster abbey. The foot and mounted police who shepherded them seemed numberless. Lining the thoroughfares the procession were or marching in nearly 100,000 soldiers. To some extent the tremendous military display was, indeed, necessiated by the shortness of the route and the consequent congestion of the crowd to an extent which, orderly as Londoners usually are, would have rendered the ordinary "thin red line" powerless to control it.

Immediately the abbey doors were opened, hours before the actual ceremony. those privileged persons possessing tickof admission began taking their seats and as the ancient edifice filled, the eye was dazzled by the sparkling of the women's jewels and the brilliance of the uniforms worn by the men.

The coronation procession, or parade, was really divided into three partsfirst, the foreign representatives and envoys; second, the British royal famthird, the king's individual procession.

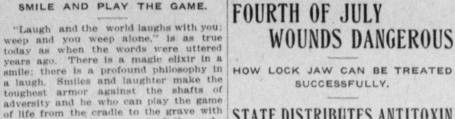

King Was Nervous

The king and queen arrived at the Abbey at 10.52 and repaired immediately to the retiring room. When it came time to place the crown on the king's head, the archbishop of Canterbury, who, it was feared for a time would be overcome and unable to perform this service, showed less perturbation than the king. The archbishop's hands trembled visibly, but otherwise he seemed composed. George was highly nervous and perspired freely. He was seen frequently to wipe the moisture from his forehead and his nervousness was so manifest that the scepter trembled visibly in his hands.

7,000 in Abbey.

Some 7,000 were admitted in all, including forty members of the royal family and relations, more than 200 foreign princes, princesses and special representatives from every civilized country the world, 1,420 peers and peeresses. 300 bishops, clergy, statesmen and am-900 members of parliament adors. from India and the British colonies.

a smile on his lips has solved the problem of living. Smiles and laughter bubble as from a well of pure delight in the days of in-Present-A Great Display of Pomp nocent childhood. The laughter of children is the sweetest music God ever gave the world. It is akin to the pulsing melodies that come from the throbbing heart of the mocking bird, vibrant with the pure joy of living. God pity the oveless home in which fear crushes the laughter in the hearts and on the lips children.

But it is in after years, in the stress and storm of the game of life, that the smile and the laugh count most in paving the way to success and happiness. He who can meet adversity with a smile has already robbed it of its sting, and he who can greet misfortune with a laugh has shackled its power to harm. It may take sand, and pluck and grit to keep back the futile tears when perhaps the work of years is toppling about his head, but he who can smile amid the wreckage shows the stuff out of which ultimate success is made. THE YEARICKS AND HOYS.

About 200 of the Friends and Relatives Gather at Hecla.

One of the pleasant annual family gatherings which take place each year, is that of the Yearicks and the Hoys, who always include their friends, as well as those connected with the families. This year's reunion was a most successful one, being held at Hecia Park on Thursday of last week, and attended by 200 or more persons.

The executive committee met at 10 clock at which meeting Adam R. Yearick presided and the necessary bus-
