Demonstration Orchards Produce Exceptionally Fine Fruit. The fruit growing industry of Cen-tre county, which up until recent years has been rather an uncertain calculation in so far as relates to its eligibility to be known as first clas stock emerges this year in a new role, and instead of only the local buyers of the fruit, there will be a number of others from distant points, who have heard of the advanced steps that a large percentage of our prominent fruit growers have taken in the matter of adopting up-to-date methods in the production of fine fruits.

The public orchard meetings which were held in this county September 21st and 22nd, were well attended by interested persons, some of whom drove a number of miles to be present. During the meetings a visit was made to the orchards, where the work of carrying out a program of the improved methods had been substituted or the former treatment given the trees, and there remained no further doubt in the minds of all that the age of spraying and other special care had been ushered in. Fully 95 per cent. of down for trial at the special term of the fruit was shown to be free of the court commencing Monday, October Coding moth worm, and other imperfections so common to the "King of
