

A SHORT CHAPTER ON INDIAN CUSTOMS

FAMOUS TRIBES THAT ONCE OCCUPIED THIS SECTION.

THE DELAWARES AND IROQUOIS

A Brief Description of Their Manners and Customs—Were Religious and Moral—Peculiar Amusements—Became Dissipated—Fond of Whiskey.

2nd Chapter. (In a former issue of the Centre Democrat we gave a sketch upon the origin of the North American Indians, and the peaceable and friendly disposition of the Red Man of these wilds. In further chapters it will be found that ill treatment and wrongs by the whites turned the Indians into savage fiends.)

Drunkenness, after the whites were dealing with them, was a common vice. It was not confined, as it is at this day, to the whites, principally to the strong-minded, the male sex, but the Indian female, as well as the male, was infatuated alike with the love of strong drink, for neither of them knew bounds to their desire; they drank while they had whiskey, or could swill it down. Drunkenness was a vice though attended with many serious consequences, nay, murder and death, that was not punishable among the Indians. It was a fashionable vice. Fornication, adultery, stealing, lying and cheating, principally the offspring of drunkenness, were considered as heinous and scandalous offenses, and were punished in various ways.

The Delaware and Iroquois married early in life, the men usually at eighteen and the women at fourteen; but they never married near relations. If an Indian man wished to marry, he sent a present, consisting of cloth, linen, occasionally a few bottles of wampum, to the nearest relations of the person whom he had fixed upon. If he that made the present, and the present pleased the matter, was formally proposed to the girl, and if the answer was affirmatively given, the bride was conducted to the bridegroom's dwelling without any further ceremony; but if the other party chose to decline the proposal, they returned the present, by way of a friendly repulse.

After the marriage the present made by the suitor, was divided among the friends of the young wife. These returned the civility by a present of Indian corn, beans, kettles, baskets, hatchets, etc. brought in solemn procession into the hut of the newly married couple. The latter commonly lodged in a friends house, till they could erect a dwelling of their own.

An Indian hut was built in the following manner: They pealed the trees abounding in sap; then cutting the bark into pieces of six or eight feet in length, they laid heavy stones upon them, that they became flat and even in drying. The frame of the hut was made by driving poles into the ground, and strengthening them by cross beams. This frame was covered both inside and outside with a species of bark that had been prepared for the purpose, and fastened tight with the best of switches of hickory. The roof ran upon a ridge, and was covered the same way. An opening was left in the roof through which the smoke passed, and one in the side, which was closed by a stick leaning against it on the outside, as a token that no one was at home, was the only bolt to prevent intruders. A lesson to whites!

There was difference in the huts of the Delaware and Iroquois; the roofs of the former being angular, and the latter round or arched. The Delaware families preferring to live separately, their huts were small; the Iroquois preferred living together, they built their houses long, with several fire places, and outside smoking openings in the roofs and sides. In their huts they displayed more singularity than art. The men wore a blanket, which hung loose over the shoulders, and generally went bare-headed. The dress which distinguished the women was a petticoat, fastened tight about the hips, and hanging down a little below the knees. A longer one would have proved an incumbrance to walking through the woods, or working in the fields.

As soon as a child was born, it was laid upon a board or straight piece of bark, covered with moss, and wrapped up in a skin or piece of cloth; and when the mother was engaged in her household work, this rude cradle, or bed, was hung to a peg or branch of a tree. Their children, they educated, to fit them to get through the world, as did their fathers. They were instructed in religion, etc. They believed that Manitto, their God, "the good spirit," could be propitiated by sacrifices, hence they observed a great many superstitious and idolatrous ceremonies. At their funeral and solemn sacrifices, the oldest man performed the offices of a priest; but in private parties each man brought a sacrifice, and offered it himself as priest. Instead of a temple, they fitted up a large dwelling house for the purpose.

Polythelism, or the gross kind of idolatry, did not exist among them, although they had their images representing the "Manitto." The images were of wood, the head of a man in miniature, which they always carried about their neck, or in a bag. They also suspended images of the kind around the neck of their children, to preserve them from illness and to ensure their success.

When they travelled or went on a journey, they manifested much carelessness about the weather yet, in their prayers, they usually began "for a clear and pleasant sky." They generally provided themselves with Indian meal which they either ate dry, mixed with sugar and water, or boiled into a kind of mush, for they never took bread made of Indian corn, for a long journey, because in summer it would spoil in three or four days. As to meat they took as they went.

If, in their travels, they had occasion to pass a deep river, on arriving at it, they set about it immediately and built a canoe, by taking a long piece of bark, to which they gave the proper form, by fastening it to ribs of light wood, bent so as to suit the occasion. When at home they had their amusements, their favorite one was dancing. The Indians, like the whites of this day, had several kinds of dances around a fire. They formed a circle and always had a leader. The men went before, and the women closed the circle. The latter danced with great decency; while those engaged they never spoke a word to the men, much less joked with them, which would have injured their character. (Are women now-a-days walking so straight?) They neither jumped nor skipped, but placed one foot forward, and then backward, yet so advanced till they reached a certain spot, then stepped in the same manner, keeping their bodies straight and their arms close to their sides. The men shouted, leapt, and stamped with violence. Their whole music consisted in a single drum which was made of an old barrel or kettle, covered with a thin deer skin and beaten with one stick, and which served only to mark the time. These dances continued until midnight.

One of the dances was the dance of peace, called the Calumet, or pipe dance, because the pipe of peace was handed about during the dance. The dancers joined hands, and leapt in a ring for some time. On a sudden the leader let the hand of his partner go and kept hold of the other. He then sprang forward, and took around the company round, so that he was enclosed by them. They then disengaged themselves as suddenly, which, as they explained it, represented the chain of friendship. A song made especially for the solemnity, was sung by all. (To be continued, as space permits.)

PENNSYLVANIA DAY.

Governor Tener, Present With Other Officials, Makes Address.

Distinguished guests and old friends came by carloads last Friday to attend the annual celebration of Pennsylvania day at State College. Foremost among the visitors were Governor Tener and many lawmakers.

The exercises consisted of a program in the auditorium, which many prominent men took part in; an inspection of the buildings, grounds and museums, a review of the cadet regiment and a spirited game of football between the sophomore and freshman classes.

In a few words Governor Tener expressed his unalloyed interest and affection in the welfare of State College and made the statement that it was the "one real university of Pennsylvania." General Thomas J. Stewart made an eloquent appeal to the citizens of the nation and paid glowing tribute to General Beaver as being the ideal type of citizen soldier. John W. Francis, warden of the Western Penitentiary, gave a short address.

NOSE BREATHING.

The nose is a better filtering plant than man has yet been able to invent. It not only filters the air before sending it to the lungs but it also warms and moistens it. Blow your nose while you are on a train or walking along a dusty road. The black that you will find on your handkerchief represents the dirt that your nose is constantly preventing from reaching your lungs.

Pure air is just as necessary to the lungs as pure water is to the stomach. Therefore breathe only through the nose. Mouth breathing is harmful because it does not warm, filter or moisten the air sufficiently. When you breathe through the mouth you short circuit the nose by stopping the openings that connect it with the bronchial tubes and the lungs.

If you find trouble in breathing through the nose something is sure to be wrong. You may have adenoids or some other obstructing growth at the back of the nose. Go to a doctor immediately and have the trouble adjusted. Mouth breathing is a bad habit. Let nothing keep you from breathing through the nose.

A Good Record.

The Stearns-Knight demonstrator, driven by Mr. P. M. Price of the Johnston Automobile Co., was in Bellefonte a short time ago and aroused a great deal of interest among local motorists during its brief visit here. Mr. Price is enthusiastic over the operation of the car in general, and the Knight type motor in particular. On a recent test run this car covered 88 2-10 miles of our most notorious roads—which were in very rough condition, with deep mudholes in shady places—on 5 1-10 gallons of gasoline. This includes stops in various towns, totaling 35 minutes, when the engine was left running. For a car of this size, such a performance is remarkable, being an average of a little more than 14 miles to the gallon.

Woman Dies Aged 105.

Mrs. Elizabeth Bryan, the oldest woman in this section of the State and member of a pioneer family of Altoona, she was probably a member of the Methodist church longer than any other in the United States, having been a communicant for 50 years. As was the custom of the women of her day, she was fond of smoking a pipe, which she continued until within a short time. She leaves three children, thirty-one grand children, twenty-four great grandchildren and one great-great grandchild.

Hard on Noses and Ears.

On Thursday morning of last week while getting his horses ready for work in the lumber camp, Clyde A. Boyer was unfortunate in losing part of his nose. When passing around in front of one of the animals the horse made a grab at him, and in the heat he lost a piece of his nose and lacerated the nose and lip. Mr. Boyer went to the Altoona hospital where his injuries were properly attended to. On the same day, and in the same community, a man by the name of Everhart had his left ear entirely chewed off by a horse that he was harnessing.—Tyron Herald.

Butchering Season.

Butchering season is opening up under favorable weather, cool and banging of winds to down squalling porkers and fat steers. Write your report to the Democrat the fattest bovines and heaviest hogs, and longest sausages? Then follows good living among the farm folk for the rest of winter.

Fair Gets Its Cash.

In spite of petitions filed by York county ministers with the state, the York Agricultural Society received its $1000 appropriation from the state. The ministers had petitioned the state to withhold the cash on the ground that immoral shows and gambling were permitted on the grounds last October.

Father, Hunting, Kills Son.

Paul Hughes, aged 17, was accidentally shot and killed by his father while the two were hunting in the woods near New Maryland. The father is prostrated.

FARMERS TO RAISE FISH.

Industry Outlined by Fishery Department.

Contemplated changes in the system of "planting" fish in the streams of the State by the Fishery Department together with suggestions to farmers to raise "crops" of fish for market, were outlined by Commissioner N. R. Buller. These include the doing away with the wholesale shipping of trout fry and using yearlings as far as possible. Farmers with naturally fine facilities for fish raising will be given every aid by the State. In his statement Mr. Buller says: "In the distribution of trout in the future it is proposed to send out yearlings so far as possible, except that in the Fall, if the streams are in proper condition, fish will then be shipped at a size varying from three to five inches. Where clubs and parties who have built ponds or otherwise made arrangements for taking care of the young fish and carry them to a mature age, the department expects much assistance and will ship the fish in the Spring in the young stage, because that will relieve the department of the necessity of carrying them in its own waters to the advanced stage. Bass propagation has been largely an experiment, due to the fact that no method of propagation has yet been discovered except the natural one."

EAGLE GIVES BATTLE.

Badly Tears Hands, Legs and Face of Hunter.

Wilbur D. Lantz and John Betz, two Altoona men, had a desperate battle with a wounded eagle on Brush mountain on Friday. They were hunting and mistook the big bird for a turkey, when it alighted on a nearby tree. They took a shot at it and broke its wing.

As it fell they ran up to capture their prize, whereupon it seized Betz's leg in its beak, meantime using its claws with painful effect. As the hawk lacerated the flesh of the leg, Lantz drew a hunting knife and prised its hold loose.

Instantly the eagle seized Lantz's right thumb and almost tore it from the hand. Betz got a club and began beating the bird over the head and body, but it fought with desperation. Closing its claws over Lantz's arm, it pecked savagely at his face.

For fully an hour the battle waged, until finally exhausted by the unequal struggle, the bird collapsed. It measured fifty-two inches from tip to tip.

CONSPIRACY CHARGE.

The Heads of the Beef Trust Placed on Trial.

The most extensive prosecution of powerful trust officials ever attempted by the United States government under the criminal clause of the Sherman law began on Wednesday when the government before Judge Carpenter demanded that the nine beef packers, alleged to be at the head of the Beef Trust, be placed on trial on the charge of criminal conspiracy in restraint of trade. It is alleged the defendants absolutely control the prices of fresh meat in the United States. The accused millionaires are liable, if convicted, to a fine of $5,000 or imprisonment for one year.

LOCAL INSTITUTE.

The Local Institute of district number one will be held at Aronburg on December 15. The following program been arranged for discussion:—Address of welcome—N. Meyer; Response—Grover Walker. "Language Work in Elementary Grades" by Miss Clara Condo and T. A. Auman.

"The School and the Home" by M. T. Zuber and S. A. Bierley. "The Spirit of School Visitation" by W. C. Miller and A. Hoferman. "The Training of Pupils for Care of School Property" by R. H. Musser and V. S. App.

Discussion—The School Code. Teachers, come prepared to join in discussion on all questions and help your fellow teachers.

Barbarous Cruelty.

Tuesday's Williamsport News says: "Constable Philip Zealor made a trip to Galeton where he arrested Wagon Blaser on a charge of cruelty. The charges preferred against Blaser were of a most revolting nature and the fine imposed seems inadequate if the man were guilty. Several residents of Galeton stated that Blaser had taken one of his horses and had fastened a trace chain to its jaw. He then hitched two horses to the chain and the jaw of the suffering animal was pulled entirely off. The injury was so frightful that the horse had to be shot. Blaser is a cruel man and Constable Zealor stated that the man pleads guilty to the charge and paid a fine of ten dollars and costs imposed by a Galeton justice of the peace."

Apples Galeore.

For the first time in twenty years, Centre county had a crop of apples greater than there is market or demand for the fruit. In some orchards the apples have not been gathered, in others only partially, and under the trees the ground is covered with fine fruit that in other years was readily sold for good prices. The best of picked apples have been delivered at railroad stations for twenty-five cents per bushel. Whilst this is true as to Pennsylvania, all other sections of the county have an abundance of apples.

Pamphlet Laws are Ready.

The pamphlet laws covering the acts of assembly adopted by the last Legislature have been received by the prothonotary and are now available for the justices of the peace for whom they are intended. The supply is limited to one each for each justice, one for each officer in the Court House and two for the law library, and the way in which they are to be obtained by others is by the applicant depositing a written request with the prothonotary and the sum of $1 with the county treasurer.

Gov's Proclamation.

Governor Tener has issued his first Thanksgiving proclamation and in it he sets aside November 30 as Thanksgiving Day, requesting the people of the Commonwealth to lay aside all worldly pursuits and enter their several places of worship for the purpose of giving thanks.

EAT YOUR WHISKEY.

Prohibition State of Kansas Produces Dry Drink for Inebriates.

Whiskey in solid form which, it is supposed, will enable a man to "eat" a stimulant and truthfully swear to his wife that he had not been "drinking," is the latest revelation presented to Commissioner Cabell, of the Internal Revenue Bureau. He has been called upon to decide whether or not "solid whiskey" is taxable for Federal revenue purposes.

This new substance comes from the prohibition State of Kansas and its inventor claims that it does not fall within the Internal Revenue Tax laws because those statutes refer only to whiskey as a liquid. In presenting this contention, it is declared that whiskey, brandy, beer and other alcoholic beverages can be solidified. This was news to the commissioner, who has passed upon many variations of intoxicating liquors, but never before had he heard of them reduced to eatable form.

While no ruling has yet been made, Mr. Cabell intimated that he likely would hold that the manufacturer of the substance was subject to a distiller's tax and the dealer in it to a wholesale or retail liquor tax.

Queer Wedding Combination.

"My grandfather married a Fox, my father a Canary and my brother a Parrot, but I got them one better," says John R. Welch, who wed Miss Eleanor Rabbit at Ansonia, Conn., last week.

In 1838 Michael Welch married Mary Fox in County Clare, Ireland. Twenty-five years afterward his son Peter led Alice Canary to the altar in New Haven, Conn. Richard, eldest son of Peter, last year found his bride in Miss Edna Parrott, and John, next in age, will contribute to the list with a "Welch-Rabbit," as he puts it.

The matrimonial records there for the last two years show that Miss Beatrice Wyre married to David Pole; Miss Edith B. Partridge to William Bush; Miss Alberta Bunyon to George Foote; Miss Grace L. Waters to Harold Fish; Miss Elsie Lyons to Edward Woods; Miss Tamma Cook to E. E. Householder; Miss Gladys Stone to Jacob Wall; Miss Mary G. Locke to Walter Dore and Miss Agnes Wolfe to Samuel Beaver.

In Derby recently Walter Graves married Miss Anita Coffin.

Farmer Weds in Hurry.

If speed is essential to success in matrimony, the Alpha Davis, aged nineteen years old, of Indianapolis, and George H. Biesel, aged forty, a farmer, have qualified.

"I'm glad to meet you, Miss Davis," said Biesel, as they were introduced at the home of a friend.

Biesel talked three minutes with Miss Davis before remarking that he thought she was just about all right, and that least another three minutes before he "popped."

"Let's get married," he suggested to the girl.

"Well, I am game," replied Miss Davis.

Together they walked to the court house to get the license. Thirty minutes after the first meeting they were married.

Got What he Deserved.

When James Whiteman and his wife were held up by a highwayman at Kurtz's Dam along the Juniata, while on their way to market with a load of produce, Whiteman made a jump at the man and although badly cut with a razor in the fight, pounded his assailant's face into pulp and left him unconscious in the road.
