Well, as we must get in some news, we will give some of the hunting news: D. P. Woodring and his party were camping on the Allegheny mountain for one week looking for a buck, but they failed to see anything that had horns on, so the only glory they had was the week's outing. They saw some fine does—but they wouldn't do. The boys are having good luck hunting small game. They have brought in several turkeys and a lot of rabbits. Prof. J. A. William brought in the largest rabbit that I have heard of. I think the way he measured it was his surprise. John didn't say what it weighed. Bunt and I just about where there was one staying. He wandered around until about 2 o'clock when, to his surprise, he came in contact with a one-legged gobbler, mad all over and Bunt cut loose on him; and away until he had used all his shells, and the turkey succeeded in dodging them all. Then Bunt threw down his gun and out with that barlow and from what Scott Cram said he had a hard fight, but Bunt managed to get a lick in with that barlow that ended the fight.

On last Monday evening, Nov. 27, Prof. J. A. Williams was given a surprise party by his school and quite a number of his friends of the town. While Mr. Williams was enjoying his evening paper there came a rap at the door and he bade them come in, and to his surprise there came streaming in nearly on hundred of his friends, a genuine surprise on the Professor. After playing some games and having a general good time, there was a sumptuous luncheon served which all greatly enjoyed.

The Rayo Lamp

It Never Flickers

The long winter evenings give a woman a splendid chance for sewing or embroidery; but her eyes suffer from the strain unless she has a good light.

The Rayo is the best lamp made.

It gives a strong, diffused light that is remarkably easy to the eyes. There is no glare to it; no flicker. It lights up a whole room. The Rayo is an economical lamp, too. You get the most possible light-value for the oil burned; and the Rayo itself is a low-priced lamp. Yet it is a handsome lamp—an ornament to any room in the house. The Rayo Lamp is easily lighted without removing shade or chimney; easy to clean and revivick. Made of solid brass, nickel-plated; also in numerous other styles and finishes.

Ask your dealer to show you his line of Rayo lamps; or write for descriptive circular to any agency of
