

WHAT SUSTAINS OUR PROSPERITY?

Not Captains of Industry, but the Masses of the People.

DECLARES WOODROW WILSON.

Business, Politics and Wealth of the Country Come Up, Not Down, He Says—All the People Do Not Believe in Democratic Government.

By WOODROW WILSON.

What fills me with confidence in the future is that the world is not waiting upon the stupidity of politics. The world has an awkward way of taking things into its own hands. The life of the people must in the long run express itself in its politics, and it does not now express itself in this country in the politics we have been accustomed to in the last decade.

There are two or three theories of government in this country. Don't deceive yourself by supposing all the people believe in democratic government, because they do not. You have only to listen to the utterances of very distinguished Republican speakers to see that they do not believe and do not pretend to believe in representative government. They will tell you they do not believe the judgment of the people can be trusted. And are you going to take counsel from these gentlemen as to the preservation of our representative institutions when they don't want them to represent the great body of the people?

Prefers Judgment of Rank and File.
I don't know whether I was born so or learned so, or what happened to me, but I know this, that the deepest conviction I have, arising out of observation and experience is this, that I would rather take the judgment of the rank and file than the judgment of the men who have become absorbed and successful leaders in great undertakings.

And I want to ask these gentlemen this query: What sustains business in the United States? What is it that makes the United States prosperous? Is it that we have great captains of industry? What would they do with out the cunning and skill, the muscle and the indomitable aspiring hope of the American people? If these people were to find hope dying out of their hearts they would become dumb driven beasts, and your enterprises would fall for lack of the very breath that sustains them.

If you want to find whether a nation is prosperous ask the men who are on the make what they hope and what they fear. Go to the country districts and ask anxious fathers who are looking for openings for their sons, where they expect to get them in, where they find doors open and where they find doors shut. Go through the places where men are making earnings and see whether they dread or confidently look forward to the future and then you will find whether America is waxing or waning, for if these men are confident, full of hope; if they know they are going to get fair treatment wherever they go, then America can conquer the world of enterprise in their hope.

But if you find what you do find men everywhere asking themselves whether the doors of opportunity have not been locked in their faces—then you will have to take a new reckoning as to the future of America.

If only those who are chosen at the top have the right of way in, what is going to happen to America? Did you ever hear of a nation that was renewed from the top? Did you ever hear of a nation that was not made virile that did not account for its youth by renewal from the bottom? Did you ever hear of a tree that drew its sap from its flowers? Does it not draw it from the dark and silent places of the soil? Does not a nation draw its power of renewal and enterprise and all its future from the ranks of the great body of unnamed men?

Friend of American Business.

If you are going to discourage these men, if you are going to put the chill of fear in their hearts, then American captains of industry can whistle for their future, and they will whistle in a wilderness.

I am the friend of American business because I know where its foundations are laid and where they are weak. These foundations are solid only when laid in the confidence of the common people.

A Democrat? Why, a man does not understand history who isn't a Democrat. A man doesn't understand enterprise who isn't a Democrat. And let me say this, Democracy is not merely a matter of programs; it is a matter of sympathy and insight. It depends upon whether your heart is in connection with the great heart of the people. It does not depend upon whether you can cunningly devise a platform that looks just and good. You can build a flimsy platform and stand on it successfully, provided its basis is in the right kind of spirit.

It is a matter of seeing, not from your eyes out, but from the eyes of other men in. Getting the vision that is in the back of the other man's head is the thing; getting the hope that is the universal hope; getting that impulse that is the common human impulse, forward. This world has been swept by wave after wave of Democratic impulse.

WILLED LOVE TO HUSBAND.

Deceased Bequest of Woman to Man Who Deserted Her.
Having no property to bequeath to her children and her husband, from whom she had been separated, and desiring to leave them some reminder of her death, Mrs. Anna Green, of Sharon, Pa., who died a few days ago, left a deathbed statement as follows:

"To whom it may concern: I, the undersigned, want the whole world to know that I leave this world without a grudge or hatred to any one. The first one I want to speak to is my husband, John Green. Of course, he doesn't care to see me. And I had a good friend to come and do this writing for me, so he can hear it after I have passed away.

"Mr. Green, I want to let your children know that I have raised them up as a mother should and feel that I have done my part. Oh, how I lie here on my bed of affliction and wish that I could see your face once beyond! How I would like to pass away in your arms! But I am thankful that one will be with me who has been with me all my life and will be with me when I die. Mr. Green, let me say to you, 'Prepare to meet thy God.'

"William Green, my dear son, be good to your wife, Ollie. Will, never forsake her and stand by her until death part you. And Josie, my dear boy, you have done the best you could, and I often think of you. Raise Dorothy up in the fear of God, for she is a good child.

"Mr. Green, my dear husband, when we stood on the floor the day that I became your bride, little did I think you would ever cast me aside and that I would pass out of the world away from you. Mr. Green, I loved you then and I love you now the same as when we were married. I fear it won't be long until my Savior comes for me. Mr. Green, I beg of you to meet me in glory. Good-by, Mr. Green. May God forgive you and take care of you. Your dear wife, Anna Green.

"Oh, how cold it is now! I think of the time when you bought me nice warm clothes and gowns. And just think that I hear your footsteps no more! I can almost feel the chilly waters of Jordan. The harbor will soon be reached. The boat is slowly coming up the river, and I will soon step on board. May God help you to prepare to meet me."

The Jelly Wobble.
Washington has launched a new dance and called it the "jelly wobble." There was a pretty general belief that the "turkey trot," "the bunny hug" and the "grizzly bear" embraced about everything that could be devised in the way of poetry of motion, and so forth, but there is a weariness about too much of the same thing. There must be changes and novelty in dances as well as in clothes and if the "jelly wobble" is what its name implies it probably isn't a very difficult thing to do.
