They will also remove several poles further up High street that had not come under the ban of the street committee. The matter was carried over by council until next meeting night.

Contractor Taylor's bill of $666,99 Wednesday afternoon, one of Farm-er Adam Smith's horses fell and was payment, but objection was raised on the point that Mr. Taylor had not vet fulfilled satisfactorily the demands made upon him to remedy a number of defects in the job. The paving in front of Mrs. Aiken's property was cited as an instance, and the statement was made that although Mr Taylor had made an attempt to improve the brick-laying at this point, -John Bullock, of the firm of it was still in bad shape. In consenent on the bill was held up.

Two bids having been received for he painting of the iron bridges at the Phoenix mill and on Lamb street, Secretary Kelly made known their contents, as follows: Charles Saylor and Fred Gehret agreed to do the laor alone for $45, or furnish all maerial and labor for $90; the Penn Decorating Co.'s bid stipulated that they would cover the bridges with graphite and oil (which they claimed was superior to paint) for the sum of $89.
