THE OLD HORSES.

As I go drilling through the town I see old horses, broken down, poor, friendless and abandoned...

When they were young and fat and strong they labored blithely all day long, or on the plow like Maud S. paced—they did their best, wherever they were.

Then there were hands to stroke the necks of these poor man-forgotten wrecks, and they were groomed and manicured, and lives of comfort seemed assured.

But when the vim of youth was over, and they could caracole no more, like outcasts they were chased away to die at least six deaths a day.

No kinder rifle ends life's storm; no friendly dose of chloroform; they'll bring a few dishonored yen, so send them to the dinky men.

When'er I see a poor old steed, sad-eyed, despairing, broken-kneed I think: "The man who wore him down should haul his burden through the town."

"Cure For Love" Work Admirably. When Mrs. Conrad, wife of Herman J. Conrad, the wealthy manager of the bottling department of the American breweries, learned that her son Harold, was greatly attached to a young woman named Venus Spanker...

Young Conrad says if his parents object, he doesn't care, as he feels confident he can make his own way in the world.

"I didn't know Frances was introduced to me as a "cure for love." If she was, it's the best medicine in the world. It worked fine and made me the happiest young man in the world," he said.

A woman doesn't use the lines in her face in fishing for compliments.
