Rosani, the Manipulator
AT THE 1913 CHAUTAUQUA.

On Children's Day, Rosani, the prince of juggling and balancing, will rule through one laughter-crammed afternoon. He will prance about with his hat standing on its rim on his nose, like as not, whips, plates, balls, pipes, sticks, bowls, glasses, swords, tops,—anything, will behave quite as if it were bewitched. Yet Rosani is no trickster. The absolute simplicity of his merry-making makes it especially delicious for the young and the old as well. Rosani takes a great flapping hat brim and with a twist here and a poke there, a frown here and a grimace there, makes himself into ten distinctly different people.

Bellefonte, July 17-23.

Circus Leopard Mangles Hand of Boy.

The prompt action of Harry Rhoads, of Shamokin, saved the life of Lester Strassner, a 14-year-old boy, at that place Friday, when Strassner climbed up on the rear of one of the Hagenbeck-Wallace circus wagons as it was being drawn out to the circus grounds. After hopping aboard the wagon, Strassner reached up to the ventilating window in the rear in order to make his hold more secure. He had planned to ride out to the circus grounds in this way. But a big leopard in the cage, seeing through the blackness, with eyes used to piercing the depths of the jungle, the hand of the boy, made a leap, and sunk its teeth into the boy's hand and then hung on.

Strassner's cries brought Rhoads, who was standing nearby, to his aid. Picking up a handful of sand he mounted the cage and threw it sharply in the leopard's face, and the beast with a snarl, let go his hold on the boy's hand, and the lad's injury was dressed at a doctor's office.

Lightning Kills Boy.

While cultivating corn on the Nerr Goss farm, near Lewistown, Sherman Stull, a lad of thirteen years, was struck by lightning Tuesday of last week and instantly killed. The bolt came apparently from a clear sky, and after striking the boy on the head, was deflected to the ground and tore a large hole near the feet of the farmer who was working but a short distance from the unfortunate lad.

Best Laxative for the Aged.

Old men and women feel the need of a laxative more than young folks, but it must be safe and harmless and one which will not cause pain. Dr. King's New Life Pills are especially good for the aged, for they act promptly and easily. Price 25c. Recommended by C. M. Parrish, Bellefonte.—Adv. June.
