LAST BISON IN PENNSYLVANIA.

When Col. John Kelly, the Revolutionary hero, on his way to mill on that dark, frosty morning in January. 1801, found his way impeded at the intersection of four wood roads by an enormous buffalo bull, and he shot the animal dead and jumped his faithful retired charger over the carcass. little thought that he had slain the last bison in Pennsylvania. But as no further reports of similar occurrences came in, and the event grew in importance, he was given the credit of his achievement, and the spot where the twelve hundred pound monster fell became known as Buffalo Cross Roads. The skull, nailed to a pitchpine was a familiar sight to travelers for the next 20 years.

Today Colonel Kelly is as well known as the buffalo slayer as he is for being one of the heroes of the battle of Princeton. He ranks in that immortal coterie composed of Jim Jackson, who shot the last elk in Pennsylvania; George Hastings, the last authentic panther killer: Dan killed the last wolf, and George Schmenk, who slew the last brown bear within our borders. Truly, five men of calibre and characteristics, but all fore Col. Kelly's exploit; they were wiped out in the White mountains, in the snow. Buffaloes were once very plentiful in the boundaries of present commonwealth. Early travelers describe herds of ten thousand individuals. They were butchered unmercifully, the hides selling at barely a shilling, or 25 cents apiece. The varie'y which inhabited Pennsylvania was not the bison of the western plains, but a larger, darker species probably identical with the woodbison of Canada northwest.

The steel towers that support elec-tric power transmission lines are be-ing increasingly used by forest rangers as fire lookout station on national forests. With the harnessing of the mountain streams a network of these lines is gradually being woven over the forests and in the absence of other convenient lookouts, the rangers

RECENT DEATHS.

REYNOLDS:-Mrs. Anna E. Reynolds, wife of George W. Reynolds, died at the Altoona hospital on Tuesday, August 5th, after a protracted illness with tuberculosis. She was fifty-five years old and was born in Centre Six years ago the family ounty. moved to Altoona where they since resided. In addition to her husband she is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Bessie Cunningham, of Altoona; one brother, H. C. Miller, of Altoona, and one sister, Mrs. Catharine Bathurst, of Graysville. The remains were taken to Graysville Thursday morning

She had been in feeble health for some time and last spring she had a fall in getting out of bed. A month or so later she fell down the cellar steps and had been laid up from that time until her death. maiden name was Drucilla Catherine Weiland and she was born at the old Weiland homestead at Linden Hall over eighty-three years ago. Her entire life was spent in that place, though she had an acquaintanceship that extended throughout Pennsvalley and other parts of the county. She was a member of the Lutheran church since girlhood and was a good, christian woman. Her husband died a number of years ago but surviving her is one daughter, Mrs. Thomas Heims, of Osceola Mills. She also eaves one sister, Mrs. Annie Windsor, of Knoxville, Tenn. Funeral services were held at her late home at Lincen Hall at 10 o'clock on Monday morning by Rev. J. I. Stonecypher, of Boalsburg, after which the remains were taken to Boalsburg for interment.

KEPT HIS NERVE AND WON.

The death of Hugh Burns, of Grampian, in the Philipsburg hospital a few days ago, says an exchange, recalls an incident where nerve and honest determination on the part of an humble citizen won out against great odds. Hughy, as he was called, had all the hard earned savings of a lifetime in the Tyrone Bank when it closed its doors away back in the seventies. He was at work on the railroad when he heard the bank had closed, down went his shovel and as fast as his legs could carry him he traveled to the bank. dwelling house which is a good thin When he reached the building quite as houses are scarce in these parts. a crowd was gathered before the door on which the usual notice was posted, telling the public well sometime. Hughy eyed the no-tice and the door. Soon one of the Jones, clerk........Philipsburg insiders came to the door and opened John E. Murray is visiting in Hun-W. > What Has Been Seems Yet to Be. The curse of this life is that whatever is once known can never be unknown. You inhabit a spot, which before you inhabited it is as indifferent to you as any other spot upon earth, and when, persuaded by some necessity, you think to leave it, you leave it not; it clings to you and with memories or things which in your experience of them gave no such promise, revenges your desertion. Time flows on, places are changed; friends who were with us are no longer with us; yet what has been seems yet to be, but barren and stripped of life.
