WITH THE STATE NEWSPAPERS.
"The High Road" one of the best of late plays was not written by Mr. Bigelow, though some of the Bigelow roads were high enough.—Allentown City Item.
The organization of the Republican state committee shows that the party is again in full control of Penrose and McNichol and the big and little luminaries are again happy.—Montrose Democrat.
When Teddy returns from South America in 1914 and Bill Flinn runs him through Pennsylvania on a special train with an open safe aboard, then there will be something doing that will put G. O. P. on the map again. It was spoils and graft that doubled the Republican party and the same thing separated it.—Huntingdon Monitor.
The machine gang is sending boiler plate to the country papers boasting for the $50,000,000 road fund which they hope to get their clutches on, and the dutiful little organs are inserting the stuff to fool the people. A reader can't have a very exalted opinion of a newspaper that lends itself to so barfaced a scheme to plunder the people.—DuBois Daily Express.
Another of President Wilson's policies triumphs in the dissolution of the European-Japanese combination for the purpose of forcing a loan upon China. Each of the five powers is now free to support its own citizens or not, as circumstances arise, in any financial engagements that they make. This is the attitude that the United States Government has assumed since it dissolved its partnership with big business and sent Dollar Diplomacy to the discard.—The New York World.

BRYAN ENDORSES WILSON.
Secretary of State Also Tries to Comfort Office Seekers.
President Wilson's administration has proceeded far enough to enable the public to determine the point of view from which he examines public questions, and, to his credit, it may be said that it is exactly the point of view from which he promised to examine public questions, says Secretary of State Bryan, in "Pulitzer's Magazine." First, as to the matter of appointments. He has looked at applications for office with a view to securing efficiency. He has not been lacking in appreciation of political services rendered during the campaign; but, true to his theory that the welfare of all the people should be placed above favors to a few, he has insisted that no one should aspire to a position who is not able to fill it to the satisfaction of the public.
It is not always easy to turn down the application of a loyal and zealous supporter, but this is often necessary for obligations of support are not necessarily reciprocal; that is, a man does not necessarily earn an office by supporting one who exercises appointing power. It is only fair to assume that a citizen in casting his vote and in exerting himself on behalf of a candidate is actuated by a desire to advance the public welfare and to secure the enactment and enforcement of laws that will promote the general good. If that is true, he is fully repaid when the person he supports uses his influence to advance the principles and policies to which he pledged. A man who would, before election, demand the promise of an office before doing campaign work, would be regarded as unfit for the office. Why, then, should he, after the election, make his commendation of the official dependent upon his receiving individual reward?
It is not meant to convey the idea that political services should not count; they ought to count. Appointments should, as far as possible, have fitness plus political merit. But this does not justify appointments where one has political merit without fitness. It is not to be expected that the President cannot know personally any large percentage of the great number of persons appointed. He must rely upon informants furnished him, and even those who are most trustworthy may advise unwisely, first, because they cannot be personally acquainted with all applicants, and second because they may yield to the temptation to reward personal friends or personal supporters to the exclusion of more deserving men. As to appointments generally, it will be conceded that the President has succeeded as well as any well-informed person would have hoped.

$1882 Paid in Bounties.
Eighteen hundred and eighty-two dollars was paid out for bounties on scalps by the commissioners up to 12 o'clock yesterday, at which time payments ceased. The claims were sent to the auditor general's office the same day and the county will receive its pro rata share of the $50,000 appropriation in July. Payments on scalp bounties, under the new act of 1913, will begin about November 1st, 1913.

MARRIAGES.
Skotnik—Moskowitz.
A wedding of unusual prominence in Jewish circles occurred in New Jersey on Sept. 14, in which Harry Skotnik, of New York city, a nephew of our townsman, Jacob Marks, was united in marriage with Miss Mary Moskowitz, daughter of Mrs. Dora Moskowitz, of Rutherford, N. J. The ceremony was performed by Rabbi Mantis, at the home of the bride's mother, and was witnessed by a number of invited guests. The bride was attired in white silk and wore a white veil, while the bridesmaids, Miss Lillie Moskowitz, sister of the bride, and Miss Goldie Skotnik, sister of the groom, were handsomely attired in white charmeuse over white silk. The groom was attended by his brother, Edward Skotnik. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Moskowitz home, and later the happy couple departed on a two weeks' wedding trip to eastern cities. Upon their return they will be at home to their friends in their furnished apartments, west 163rd street, New York City. The groom is employed in the money order department of the New York City postoffice, and is held in the highest esteem by his many acquaintances.

Davis—Gheritty.
A quiet but very pretty wedding ceremony was celebrated at the rectory of St. John's Catholic church on east Bishop street, Tuesday morning at 6 o'clock, which united in holy bonds of wedlock James C. Davis and Miss Marie Gheritty, two popular young people of our city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. P. McArdle, pastor of St. John's Catholic church in the presence of the attendants only, who were Mr. Ben. Beezer as best man, and Miss Agnes Gheritty, a sister of the bride, as bridesmaid. Immediately after the ceremony they were taken by automobile to Sunbury, where they took the train for a wedding tour to eastern cities. Mr. Beezer and Miss Gheritty accompanied them as far as Sunbury to see them safe on their journey, returning to Bellefonte by auto. The groom is the youngest son of Mr. J. M. Davis, proprietor of the Garman House and assists his father in conducting that popular hostelry. Miss Gheritty is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Gheritty, of south Spring street, and is a very pretty and accomplished young lady. On returning from their wedding trip they will go to housekeeping in rooms in the Kurtz residence on west High street. It is the sincere wish of their many friends that their married life may be a happy and prosperous one.
