NLRB RULES AGAINST TITAN METAL COMPANY

part and await a final order from the NLRB. When this order has been filed the Company can either ignore the order or seek an appeal in a higher court. If the final order of the NLRB is ignored, the NLRB may go to a higher court requesting a court order to enforce its ruling upon the Company.

Word of Examiner Webb's ruling was welcomed here yesterday by members of the striking group, some of whom have had no employment since the walkout last January 15. Scores of others, however, have obtained employment elsewhere in Bellefonte, and in eastern cities, and it is problematical if many of them would return to work even in the event that Examiner Webb's recommendations are sustained.

No comment was forthcoming yesterday from company officials, it being reported that their future course will not be determined until they have had ample time to study the complete report and analyze its provisions.

sets forth that it does not appear that any of the pickets or others on strike, except possibly three, voted or took part in the election, as the total ballot was only 333 and the number of employees working on the day of the election was 300.

Commenting on the strike, Webb's report says: "It appears that the strike was called on account of low wages and other unsatisfactory conditions in the plant and because the TEPA, being the only recognized representative for collective bargaining and being under the influence and domination of the respondent, had failed to function as such representative, and nothing could be accomplished through this association, therefore the only alternative was to continue under these conditions or strike."

Today, with the wide acceptance of the electric iron, washer, radio, refrigerator, and small appliances, and the growing popularity of the electric range, the roaster, the electric water heater, and the I. In regard to service on electric appliances, West Penn will continue to accept full responsibility for providing expert and prompt service on all equipment sold directly or in the past by West Penn Appliance Company.

LUCKY TEETERS' ESCAPE INJURY

Gordon escaped with a sprained left arm and three or four minor bruises. The Shoppe car, a 1936 Chevrolet sedan was demolished and the parked coupe, a LaSalle, owned by Guy Symmonds, who resides on South Water Street, was badly damaged.

According to the driver of the machine, he and Gordon were driving north on Water Street about 4:30 o'clock Monday morning when upon approaching the curve at the Claster Lumber Yard, Shoppe claimed the steering wheel, and the car ran to the right of the road, struck a step at the front of a concrete retaining wall and took to the air.

The top of the coupe, from the window sills upward, was demolished, while the Shoppe car, damaged about the front, rear, top and sides, is virtually a mass of junk. The mishap was investigated by Chief of Police Dukeman, who resides near the scene of the crash.

OVERLONG CREDIT SEEN AS MENACE

part of the National Retail Credit Association to educate the retailer-member to see the fallacy and pitfalls of the over-extension of long-term credit, terms that in some cases extend beyond the life of the merchandise.

"This was only part of a campaign conducted by the Association to make merchants see the folly of competing in credit terms to build greater sales volume. A direct culmination of this campaign came at the Silver Anniversary Convention of the Association in Spokane last June when its department store group sponsored a resolution (which carried unanimously) recommending the following maximum terms on installment sales:

Electric refrigerators, 24 months; furniture, 18 months; radios, 12 months; washing machines, 12 months; stoves and ranges, 18 months; and fur coats, over $300, 6 months.

"This is a matter of vital concern to everyone," continued Mr. Crowder; "to the consumer as well as to the retailer. The selling and buying of merchandise on terms that are too long, judged by the dictates of common sense, is trading too much on the future. The man who obligates himself to pay for an article over a period of two or three years is taking too much of a gamble, for no one can foresee what may happen in two or three years' time. Loss of employment or loss of health may entirely change his financial condition."

"Another dangerous tendency is for the consumer to 'overload' on obligations. In other words, he buys one article after another on time payments until he may have several installment contracts on his hands—he is obligated to the extent of his earnings. Then something unforeseen happens and a financial tragedy follows.

TOWN'S LAST RELICS ARE ON WAY 'OUT'

All this high romance and glamour was cut to the bone in Council Monday night when Councilman Emerick declared he thought it was about time the stepping stones be removed. Not that he is against these tokens of the good old days, but simply because motorists of low-slung cars are continually bending fenders, damaging running boards, and losing tempers by striking them in pulling up to curbs.

Then, too, the driver who thoughtlessly parks beside a stepping-stone finds the stones are so high he can't open the doors of his car.

So the Borough Solicitor is to draw up a resolution calling either for the removal of the stones; for lowering them to the same grade as the curb; or for setting them back from the curb far enough that they no longer present a hazard to 1937 traffic.
