CHRISTIAN FRUITFULNESS

International Sunday School Lesson for November 28, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples."—John 15:8.

Lesson Text: John 15: 1-16.

The figurative language employed by Jesus in the scripture assigned for our study this week is familiar to us all, because of its familiarity, we are likely to pass over it without giving it the deep thought it deserves. It is strikingly true that the symbols and figures used by Jesus in his teaching were simple ones with which the people to whom he talked were most familiar.

In order to impress upon his hearers the fact that God expects fruitfulness of those who profess to love and serve him, Jesus likened himself to a vine and my Father to the husbandman. I am the vine and the Father is the husbandman. The branches which are the disciples are the fruit which the vine should bear. The husbandman is the Father who prunes the vine so that it may bear more and better fruit.

Without this vital union with Christ, Christian fruitfulness is impossible. For "without me ye can do nothing," Jesus declares. The mark of true Christian living is fruitfulness. The branch which bears no fruit is worthless so the follower of Christ who is fruitless can be of no use to God. The fruitless branches are cut away in order to make room for those which will bear fruit. There are many who have publicly confessed Christ, and become members of his church, who, by their lives show to the world that they have not been regenerated. Their profession was only a nominal one. Jesus, who is the true vine, told his hearers that not everyone who said, "Lord, Lord" would enter the kingdom of heaven, but he that doth the will of my Father which is in heaven. The difference between the fruitful branch and the unfruitful one lies in the little word "do." He who abideth in the vine (in Christ) will want to "do" what Christ commands. As it is often necessary to prune the fruitful branches of the vine in order that these vines may bear more and better fruit so God often prunes or cuts away from the lives of Christians things which have or may come between the Christian and his rendering the service to God of which he is capable. This pruning may take the form of new and hard revelations of truth which have to be accepted, or the dropping of old notions which have long been a part of one's creed. It may take the form of sorrow trials or testings but he who feels the pruning knife of the Great Husbandman should count himself fortunate because it may be taken as evidence that God has found a fruitful branch.

"So, we come to the first and basic abiding in Christ. What do we mean by this statement? To abide in Christ in the sense in which the branches abide in the vine is that we shall continue to draw from Christ the qualities of life of which he is the eternal source. Self-control, truthfulness, honesty, purity, forgiveness, brotherliness, goodwill, love in its deepest meaning, all these come from Christ and should be expressed in the life and relationship of the Christian who can be said to "abide in Christ." Paul said, "To me to live is Christ." So closely was his life knit with Christ that for Paul to live was actually to let Christ live again in him. Can it be said of us that others can "see Jesus in us"?

If we abide in Christ, we will "continue in His love." How can we continue in His love? He answers this question for us: "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments and abide in His love." If Christ's disciples "love him, as Christ loves his Father, then the same degree of love must be shown one to another. As Christ loved us so much that he was willing to die for us, so must we who are his followers love others so much that we shall be willing if need be, to lay down our lives for them. And that is what it means to continue in Christ's love—to go on demonstrating his quality of love even if it leads to death itself.

If we love Christ, he says, "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you." Do we want to be friends of Christ? Friends who in intimate fellowship, sharing each other's burdens and responsibilities, Christ wants us as his friends and we can be if we do those things he wants us to do. Christ's objective for us is three-fold: that we should go and bring forth fruit; that our fruit should be permanent; and that we should ask and receive in his name, remembering if we abide in him "whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it you."

BLANCHARD

Mrs. V. C. Ridge entertained her son William Ridge of Milesburg for two days last week. Mrs. McDowell and daughter of State College, were business callers in town on Thursday. They also were guests of Mrs. J. K. Dyer.
