

Echoes From the Past

FIFTY YEARS AGO

The News states that Centre Hall has a printing office owned by Mr. Mingle and in charge of Mr. Dehinger. The new office will be run for the present as a job office but will in the future issue a paper.

Rev. A. D. Wirtz, formerly of Houserville, this county, and of late years so successful in revival work in Huntington County, received a unanimous call from the First Baptist church at Oberlin, Kansas. He has accepted the call and has already been very successful in revival work in his new state.

Patrick Flannigan, of Moshannon, was so unfortunate as to lose his train one day last week. He fell off a train and was struck by the tank of an engine on a side track and fell with his arm across the rail. The train on which he was braking passed over the arm, cutting it off. It was a narrow escape, and Mr. Flannigan is fortunate in escaping with his life.

Track laying on the Nittany Valley Railroad is progressing rapidly considering the disagreeable weather. The Old Fellows' road and the new lodge room in Crider's block on Saturday. Miss Mollie Long, a graduate of the Democrat office and one of the best lady types ever connected with this newspaper, is occupying a similar position on one of the Roanoke, Va., papers.

Manager A. L. Burkholder, of Altoona, has been in town making arrangements for his brother, H. W. Burkholder, who is champion pedestrian of central Pennsylvania, to give a grand exhibition of speed and endurance at the Armory Hall, on Thursday and Friday evenings of next week. Mr. Burkholder must be a Sullivan in his business as he will offer a purse to anyone who will stay with him for two hours.

Joseph Lutz, an employee of the glass works, received very serious injuries on last Tuesday, by falling from the roof of the building. He was engaged in putting some sheet iron around the furnace stack, when his foothold slipped and he fell a distance of about 20 feet. Dr. Harris was summoned and took the injured man to his residence on Allegheny Street and rendered the necessary medical assistance. Just how bad his injuries are, we were unable to learn at this writing.

Rumor hath it that the Messrs. Collins have purchased the Pettrick property on High Street. We hope such may be the case. If they purchase we may expect to see a fine building erected with perhaps an opera house in the rear. There is nothing fossiliferous about these gentlemen and very much of the prosperity of Bellefonte today is due to the Messrs. Collins. They have never received the right hand of fellowship from the people of Bellefonte, and in fact some of our venerable moss backs have regarded them as infringing on the domain of the fossils. A few more men like the Collins and Shoenmakers would make Bellefonte and Centre County fairly spin.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Among the larger donations made to the Red Cross in Centre County was a check for $100 from C. E. Allison, an officer in the Spring Mills Auxiliary.

In a collision between two bobbeds at the corner of Bishop and Spring streets, several costlers received severe shaking up, but were not seriously injured. One of the cutters was owned by John Kline and was running on Bishop and Spring streets. The other was owned by Lee Bolt, and was traveling on Logan and Spring streets.

J. Wells Smith, prominent citizen of Howard, was instantly killed at his sawmill near Montoursville, Lycoming county, when his clothing was caught on a rapidly revolving shaft and he was whirled to his death. Although there were no eyewitnesses to the accident, it was believed Mr. Smith was in the act of replacing a belt on a pulley at the time. The new engine of the Valentine One Land Association's furnace is about in place. The iron tank which formed the roof of the engine house and which had to be removed in order to make room for the new engine has disappeared and gives place to a frame roof. The water for the furnace will be supplied from a tank to be erected on the hill above the furnace.

A singular accident happened a very beautiful black horse which resulted in its death. The horse was tied to an iron hitching post in front of Mr. John Curtin's residence when a conveyance of some kind came rattling along. The horse took fright and plunged forward, as was indicated by the hitching strap, and was impaled on the post. The post penetrated the animal's body near the groin, and the animal had to be shot to relieve its misery.

The charitably inclined ladies of our town are interesting themselves in the Blair Educational bill as a means of getting rid of the surplus in the treasury and at the same time educating the children of the United States. We are satisfied that every State and territory in the Union is not only able and willing to educate its children but is actually doing it, and the Blair scheme is simply on the people. The next move on the part of men like Blair will be to clothe and feed the children of the Country. If every child is to grow up under the care and nurture of the Government of the United States, there will be a nation of mendicants and lose our self respect and the manly independence that comes of an honest struggle with the world.

Some of the heaviest ice ever brought to Bellefonte was being stored in local ice houses. It was from 18 to 20 inches thick and the ordinary size cakes weighed 250 pounds each.

Sunday School Lesson

MINISTERING TO PHYSICAL NEEDS.

International Sunday School Lesson for January 23, 1938.

GOLDEN TEXT: "And he healed many that were sick." Mark 1:34.

(Lesson Text: Mark 1: 29-45.)

Four cities stand out in the life of Jesus. He was born in Bethlehem. He grew up in Nazareth, he died in Jerusalem, but in and around the city of Capernaum he did most of his work. In our lesson last week we were told that he and his first four disciples, Peter, Andrew, James and John, went into Capernaum and it being the Sabbath, into the synagogue where Jesus taught with such authority that those who heard were "astounded at his teaching."

After the service was over, they went to the home of Peter and his brother, Andrew.

Arriving at the home, they learned that Peter's mother-in-law was sick of a fever. As the senior woman in an Oriental home is the real head of the household, everything was not in the desired order to entertain the guests. When informed of the woman's illness, Jesus went to her room and, taking her by the hand, raised her up. Immediately the fever left her, her strength was restored and she was able to minister unto them. Jesus not only cured the disease but so great was the strength which came through the grasp of Jesus that this woman did not suffer the usual after-effects of the ravages of fever.

Word of this miraculous healing quickly spread over the city. As soon as the Sabbath was over (which was when the sun set) and the people could go where they wanted to, they flocked to Jesus with their sick. So great was the crowd that Mark described it, said, "And all the city was gathered at his door." And Jesus "healed many that were sick with divers diseases, and cast out many demons."

Despite the strain of the day, Jesus arose next morning long before dawn and sought a place where he could commune with God in solitude. "There is every reason to believe that prayer was Jesus' normal habit, and it was from this practice that he derived the strength and special occasions demanded special treasures. As the physical frame is restored in rest and sleep, the spiritual being of Jesus found its life in communion with his Father. Prayer was his rest, as it is the rest of all who are really in touch with God. Worn by the effects of the last day, he needed spiritual recuperation and

Theodore H. Robinson says, "Two things have emerged from the account of the early work of Jesus in this chapter. Though it has come to us in 'samples' we can see that his busy life was already affected by the conflict between the material and the spiritual, between what people wanted and what he desired to give them. This, however, is less prominent than the other features of his life in these days—that all-powerful authority which characterized his work. It appears in his teaching, both of the ordinary forms of sickness and of that most terrible of all diseases, leprosy."

Although Jesus gave strict orders to the man that he should not say anything about his healing to anyone, but should go show himself to the priest, the man was so overjoyed at the wonderful thing which had happened to him that he could not refrain from publishing the good news. It had the result which Jesus expected and which he was trying to avoid—he was forced to leave the cities and crowded places and go into the desert places in order to do any teaching at all. But he did not escape him, coming from every quarter.

Although Jesus gave strict orders to the man that he should not say anything about his healing to anyone, but should go show himself to the priest, the man was so overjoyed at the wonderful thing which had happened to him that he could
