Charlie Wert and son, Walter, of Madisonburg began sawing lumber on the Seward Benner timber tract, at Woodward, for the Heimback Lumber company. The same company also bought a small timber tract from William Boob in the same neighborhood.

Squire C. W. Slack, of Centre Hall, is finding it difficult to recover strength following a heart attack suffered in his home two weeks ago. While he is able to be about, he has not been giving attention to his office duties. Low blood pressure is retarding progress.

Fred Mensch, Milheim dairyman, went to Sunbury, last Thursday and submitted to a tonsillectomy, the operation having been performed by Dr. W. S. Wentzel at the Mary M. Packer Hospital. Mr. Mensch returned home later in the week and has since been confined to his home. Ralph Colyer has taken over temporarily the business of delivering milk on the various routes.

Dale S. Musser, an employee of the Bell Telephone Company for twenty-eight years, and located at the present time at Altoona, underwent an appendectomy at the Altoona Hospital Monday night of last week. At this time his condition is reported as good. His mother, Mrs. Ada Musser, of Milheim, went out to the Mt. City last Thursday to be of assistance at the home when he is returned from the institution.

The Spring Mills Fish and Game Association in a letter sent out to its members states that during the past year it has had excellent results in raising brown trout, being able to place in streams about 9000. The association through its efforts was able to secure from other sources for distribution in suitable streams 10,000 brown trout, 13,700 brook trout and 3000 rainbow.

To aid the work the association is pleading for the renewal of memberships and interesting others to become members. The membership fee is $1.00 per year, which may be sent to the secretary, Guy L. Corman, Spring Mills.

The free lunch is gradually dying out at public sales, in Centre County, and in its stead most sales bills carry the notice, "Lunch will be served by the Ladies Aid Society," or some other church organization. This, of course, gives a profit to the one serving the lunch, whereas in years gone by the farmer holding the vendue was obliged to feed some 600 or 700 persons free of charge. This was a big item of expense, often running to $7500 and more, and required much hard work by the family and neighbors right at a time when work was mouning high in preparation for the sale of the farm stock, implements and household effects. The free lunch is out, and no farmer would care to revive it. It was a gross imposition on the farmer.

Following more than 20 years of service as agent for the Prudential Life Insurance company in Bellefonte, Oscar M. Zimmerman, of Bush Addition, has been retired from active service, according to an announcement made last week by Leonard O'Donnell, head of the Bellefonte office. The condition of Mr. Zimmerman's health made it necessary for him to give up his work but he will still maintain an interest in the insurance company. Harry J. Snyder, of Euston, has been transferred here from the company's head office to fill the vacancy here and in Nittany Valley. Mr. Snyder and his wife and son expect to make Bellefonte their residence as soon as they are able to find suitable living quarters. Mr. Zimmerman, who has worked in and around Bellefonte during his association with the company, was the oldest agent in this section in point of service.

The WPA sponsored by the county commissioners calling for the walling of the big cut at the Centre Hall borough-Potter township line is about to be commenced. The cut was the result of extending the building of State Highway route No. 45 into the borough as far as the railroad crossing where it would finish at a natural elevation. The cut varies in depth from zero to about ten feet and faces the properties of Wallace Igen and David Stoner, in the township. V. A. Auman and Mrs. W. A. Odenkirk in the borough on the west side. On the east side the cut is of considerable depth. It faces the properties of Mrs. E. W. Crawford and Clyde E. Bradford in Potter township, and G. O. Benner in the borough. It is understood the bank will be walled and concrete steps built to the walk level at each of the properties named. Twenty-four men, laborers, stone masons, carpenters and concrete finishers, also truck drivers, have been called. Clyde E. Bradford has been named foreman, having been switched from a foremanship on the Buffalo Run Valley road to the project at his door.

ORCHARDS NEED NITROGEN APPLIED EARLY IN SPRING

Productivity of an orchard, as well as tree growth, is limited by the availability of nitrogen and water in the soil.
Nitrogen fertilizer should be applied as soon as possible after the frost leaves the ground, recommends County Agent R. C. Blaney. When applied in the form of nitrate of soda, one-quarter to one-third pound should be used for each year of the tree's age up to 20 years. Cherries, peaches, and plums require one-third to one-half pound for each year of the tree's age, up to 10 years. The amount to apply will naturally vary with the soil fertility. Other quickly available nitrogenous fertilizers also will give satisfactory results.
The average annual rainfall for Pennsylvania is from three to four times as much as is needed by most orchards. Because of unequal distribution, however, both trees and sod or cover crop suffer from an insufficient supply of water during most growing seasons. Therefore, a soil capable of absorbing rainfall quickly and having a high moisture holding capacity is essential. This minimizes surface run-off and erosion. Stimulating a vigorous growth of sod or cover crop in the orchard by the use of phosphate, lime, and potash will help make this possible. In addition, there is the possible benefit to the trees from the decaying vegetable matter and from the fertilizers.
Early spring cultivation is most beneficial for stimulating vigorous tree growth. However, when continuing into August, July, and even late June, cultivation tends to deplete the soil because of excessive erosion and reduced cover crop growth.
Apple orchards are frequently kept in sod which sometimes takes most of the nitrogen applied and the trees may suffer. This may be overcome by breaking up the sod in early spring, preferably before the nitrogen is applied.

Officers and enlisted men of Machine Gun Troop, 103rd Cavalry, Bellefonte, were highly commended last Wednesday night at the conclusion of the annual Federal inspection held at the Troop Armory just east of Bellefonte. The inspection was in charge of Col. Homer M. Groninger, of Harrisburg, and Major Maurice Rose, of Tyrone, both regular army officers attached to the 103rd Cavalry. Guest officers, in addition to Col. Jones, included Edward C. Staekpole, of Harrisburg, Commanding General of the 52nd Cavalry Brigade of which the 103rd Cavalry is part; Lt. Col. Jobless Veterans Must Register

Pennsylvania, whether or not he is a member of a veterans' organization, should register at his nearest State Employment Office; while members of a veteran post, who know unemployed non-members, will be doing an excellent service by calling the attention of their unemployed comrades to the registration program. Secretary Basore stated in urging the cooperation of all veterans.
Mr. Basore explained that upon completion of the campaign, the State Employment Service will have a more complete record of the qualifications, experience and age of unemployed veterans, as well as a better estimate of the number of veterans without employment in Pennsylvania.
"Possessing this information will enable the State Employment Office to plan its employer-contact program with greater efficiency and understanding," said Mr. Basore.

Adventure in the Dark
there—and they'll come and get me."
He started to seat himself beside the girl, but she pleaded she preferred to sit alone—would he please sit in back?
"Isn't this silly of you?" he inquired as they drove off. "I'm a complete stranger to you, yet you pick me up. Aren't you scared?"
"I am not afraid—of anything," answered the woman.
They drove on until they reached Roslyn. They halted at a filling station, where there was only one telephone.
"I can wait," said the young woman. "You make your call—and then I'll make mine."
Colonel Hartney put through his call—instructions, and stepped aside to permit the girl to telephone.
Politely, he started to walk away, but not until he heard her ask in calm, clear tones for a number in Hollywood, Cal., with instructions to reverse the charges.
For fully ten minutes, she talked earnestly over the phone and then hung up. She came toward him.
"In the light for the first time, he noticed how truly attractive she was. Her eyes seemed strangely attracted with some emotion, but she was calm enough as she spoke to him.
"I wish," she said, "I had the time to drive you home. But," she added apologetically, "I have an important appointment. Good-bye." She stepped into her car and was off.

Colonel Hartney learned who she was when he picked up a newspaper the next day and saw her picture on the first page.
From the paper he learned that the "very important appointment" she had was with Death!
The mysterious girl was Rosamond Pynchot.

Crafty Old-Time Woodsmen Used Branding System
men sent workers down the river to locate the lost lumber. It was finally found in Havre de Gras, Maryland, which, along with Williamsport, was one of the biggest lumber centers.
The Williamsport lumbermen were quick to notice their extra-fine lumber.
"Their logs from Clearfield county," remarked a Williamsport man, "No and they ain't," quickly recognized a Havre de Gras man, "there's no mark on 'em."
Sure enough there was no mark to identify the lost lumber. The wily lumbermen from Williamsport doubted a bucket of water on an end of one of the logs which were piled on dry land and sure enough the brand mark of a Clearfield county cutter popped into view. The Havre de Gras resident had cut six inches off the ends of the logs but the brand mark was revived by the water.
It took smart men to trim a fella from central Pennsylvania in those days.
