

POMONA GRANGE NEWS

We are confident all granges represented at the Grange Lecturers' Conference at State College, this week, April 13, 14, 15, will reap much benefit if the many interesting things demonstrated there will be put to practical use in our granges.

Your Pomona lecturer would like to know just what has been or is being done in our granges regarding the projects as suggested some time ago. We again urge you to choose these eight projects best suited to your grange and begin an active campaign as soon as possible.

All over Centre County we must fight erosion, especially sheet and water erosion. We are positive that Mr. Bamer, with his illustrated talk, in a program on this topic, would be gratefully received by your members.

Then how about that Kelly and Saunders Day project, number ten? One which could be of so much profit to your grange.

Port Matilda grange has held one of the outdoor agricultural demonstrations in project number 18 and have the other two arranged for future dates. This grange also had a very interesting and profitable demonstration during program hour at last meeting. Mr. Bamer, Extension Agronomist, with Mr. Tatt, Assistant County Agent, gave an unusually interesting talk on Soil Erosion and illustrated same with slides, picturing this farm problem which we all have, and the methods found to be most preventive in the much needed fight against this farm enemy. Seventeen of the members, in dialogue form, presented a good story of "Our Own Earth" portraying necessary elements in producing good crops. Top soil, that seven inches of the earth's upper crust on which all life depends, showed the importance of her family; parent rock, quartz, feldspar, humus, nitrogen, potassium, calcium, phosphorus, magnesium, iron, sulphur, zinc, borax, manganese, copper, parastite and caprophyte, and erosion. As an illustration of possible effects of erosion this Farm Enemy Number One, we mention Providence Cave in Georgia. This originated from the Drip of a barn roof and in eight years, has attained the size of a young canyon, losing soil at the rate of 32 carloads a week and ruining 40 acres of good bottom land, completely destroying the farm for future use.

There were 55 patients in the hospital at the beginning of this week.

Gov. Earle Bans Sale of Life in the State
Governor Earle Saturday issued an order forbidding the sale of the current issue of Life magazine unless pictures of child-birth are removed from the copies.
He held that four pages of the magazine, containing pictures and text, concerning the motion picture, "The Birth of a Baby," were in violation of the 1860 law, forbidding the "publication and sale of lewd, lascivious, obscene literature or pictures."

When the United States entered the World War, Mr. BronnMiller sought to enlist with the American forces but was rejected because of ill health at that time.
Recognized as a keen observer of political and public affairs, he was drafted by Democratic party leaders of Schuylkill county to run for State Assemblyman from the Fourth Schuylkill District. His election established a precedent—he was the first Democrat to represent that district in the legislature.

Before expiration of his term in the House, Mr. BronnMiller successfully campaigned for the office of county commissioner. He also won the next two successive terms. In 1930 he was elected Democratic county chairman but later resigned when he sought his third term as county commissioner on an independent ticket.

Mr. BronnMiller assumed the position of Deputy Secretary of Highways while completing his twelfth year as county commissioner.
One of his most important achievements while serving as deputy secretary was creation of a perpetual inventory system for the entire department. Under this system a constant and thorough checkup is made of equipment and material to prevent surplus stocks from accumulating in the field and assure equal distribution among all districts.

Mr. BronnMiller, a life-long Democrat, has always actively supported the party's candidates in election campaigns. A brilliant orator, he has gained wide renown for his forceful sayings and is in great demand for speech-making at party rallies.
Mr. BronnMiller belongs to the Masonic and Odd Fellows' lodges and is a member of the Carlisle County Club. He was superintendent of the Sunday school of Trinity Lutheran church, Pottsville, for 12 years, and taught the largest men's Bible class ever enrolled in that community.

In 1918 Mr. BronnMiller married Minerva Hasenauer, of Pottsville. They are the parents of one child, Ronald, 12.

BETTERS to the Editor

YOUTH WILL BE SERVED

To the Editor:—
In May 1935 a grand jury informed Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York that it recommended the appointment of a special prosecutor to convict the city's racketeers. The dangerous post was offered to three "big name" lawyers, all of whom declined with haste. Finally the job was offered to a practically unknown lawyer named Thomas E. Dewey. He was only 33 years old.

Youthful as he was, he has since compiled a better record against racketeers than any other lawyer has ever done, securing 71 convictions out of his first 73 cases—almost a 100% record—against the nation's most difficult culprits. The nation today watches Dewey with wonder. He was only a youth; but he showed everyone how a job should be done.

Today we have plenty of other youths who are doing good work in their big responsibilities. Arnold Gingrich, who made journalistic history with his "Esquire" magazine, assumed the editorship at the age of only 30. He started an expensive magazine in the first depression—and made it pay. Otis L. Weiss was editor of "McCall's" magazine at 25. Nikola Tesla, at the early age of 29 was the inventor and discoverer of arc lighting. Newspapemen Roy Howard was president and general manager of the "United Press" at 29, and at 35 was chairman of the Board. Charles M. Schwab at 25 was supt. of the Homestead Works; at 27 was general supt. of the Thompson Steel Works; and at 35 was president of the Carnegie Steel Co.

And some think youths can't handle big jobs.
Herman B. Wells, 35 years old, was in the news last week by his selection as president of Indiana U. Mildred McFee was president of Wellesley College at the age of 36. Lloyd K. Garrison was dean of the Wisconsin U. law school at 35. Robert M. Hutchins was head of Chicago U. at 30. Waynesburg College selected Paul R. Stewart when he was only 34. Allegheny College selected William S. Tolley as president when he was but 31. John H. Finley, now editor of the "N. Y. Times" was president of Knox College at 29; and editor of "Harper's Weekly" at 26.

Others still active include Francis Pendleton Gaines, who became president of Wake Forest College (N. C.) at 35; and of Washington & Lee University at 38. Gordon K. Chalmers, who became president of Rockford College at 30. Harry Woodburn Chase was president of N. C. U. at 36; and Harman W. Caldwell, president of the U. of Georgia at 36.
Hamilton Holt, now president of Rollins College, was managing editor of "The Independent" magazine when but 27 yrs. Charles H. Gruchfield is program director of WBY at 25 yrs. Manuel Quizon, president of the Philippine Commonwealth, was governor of his province at 25 yrs. Richard E. Byrd was a Lt. Commander at 28 and flew over the North Pole at 38. Anthony Eden was English Prime Minister before 40. David E. Lilienthal became a director of TVA when only 34. William S. Paley was head of the Columbia Broadcasting Co. at 27. Carl Laemmle was a producer of pictures in Hollywood at 25 yrs. of age.

The woods are so full of young men who have achieved big things that the mystery is how we regard them as so unusual, extraordinary and exceptional. We see their youth with a passing thought and then forget. Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., was a senator at 25 yrs. Robert Moses was chief of staff of the N. Y. State Reconstruction committee at the early age of 31. Mayor Fiorello La Guardia was a congressman at 35 and a consular agent in Fiume at 22 yrs. All these men have and are making their reputations today. Youthfulness was no hindrance to their achievements. So it can be in the future.

Now is the time to trim out diseased-infected, insect-infested, or damaged branches of shrubs, hedges, and trees.
