In Defense of the Lowly Crow

(By Henry W. Shoemaker)

Though there are many misguided individuals who think the time is ripe for a birdless world and are loing all in their power to hurry long sterile conditions so vividly described in Lonfellow's poem, "The Birds of Killingly," there is yet much work left for all birds, especially the crow.

Recently in that admirable publication "The Anti-Steel Trap News" appeared the following:

"Infestations of grasshoppers in twenty-three western agricultural states appear probable this year, is the alarming report that greets us from Bowman, Montana, where R. L. Shotwell of the Federal Bureau of Entomology bases his forecast on a count made in scattered counties of the 23 states where grasshopper eggs are due to hatch this spring.

The infestation, it is said, will be from five to six times as great in some territories as in 1937. Plans to carry on poisoning campaigns to rid the country of this growing menace are being carried forward. One of the best antidotes to the prosperity of a grasshopper plague is the crow. Isn't it time the virtues of his maligned bird were dwelt upon; that his balanced diet which includes grasshoppers and their eggs was stressed to the end that its enemies may be restrained from inflicting wholesale destruction of the species under the misapprehension that it has no redeeming purpose in life.

A recent issue of a sporting magazine speaks typically of the crow, "Kill the Crow." Says the editor, "As yet no one has come forward with any evidence in defense of the crow and we doubt if they do." Many states are using dynamite where the crows have winter roosts and this method brings results. Crows are migratory, and it is urged that states, where they gang up in winter roosts, should not have to bear all the expense of removing crows which would be sweeping on wild life (1) in other states during the spring and summer months.

"In Oklahoma about 500,000 crows are killed each year by state (government) men using dynamite. Illinois was a pioneer state in wholesale crow killing, starting off with the miniature cannons trained on the roosts at night.

"Crows are the chief enemy of wild life (reader kindly substitute game birds for wild life and he will recognize the munitions maker's voice in the vilification of the crow), causing heavy losses of eggs and young on the breeding grounds. They also destroy many other game and insectivorous birds and small mammals. They also raid crops at times and are carriers of hog cholera and other epidemics among domestic animals.

"The most effective method of control is applied at the roosts where tin bombs charged with dynamite and bird shot are strung in the branches of trees where crows assemble, then touched off after the birds have

MILESBURG-UNIONVILLE

PASTOR SERIOUSLY ILL

The Rev. D. D. Kauffman, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church at Milesburg and Unionville, suffered a heart attack Friday while attending the central Pennsylvania conference of the M. E. church in Williamsport. He was removed to the Williamsport Hospital, where his condition was regarded as being quite serious for several days.

Yesterday information from the hospital was to the effect that the Rev. Mr. Kauffman is showing some improvement, although he is still confined to bed. No predictions were made as to when he might be able to return home. The pastor, who has been at the Milesburg charge for the past three years, has been in poor health for some years and before coming to Centre County had been off duty for an extended time because of illness. He soon will be eligible for retirement, it is reported.

LOCAL MOTOR POLICE MEASURED FOR UNIFORMS

All members of the State Motor Police at Rockview barracks, the Pleasant Gap substation and the Bellefonte headquarters, went to Harrisburg during the weekend to be measured for the new uniforms of the Motor Police.

The new uniforms, now worn by the recent graduates of the Myers-town and Hershey Training Schools, are dark gray in color. The coat has an open collar and a gray shirt and black four-in-hand tie are worn. The breeches are gray with a black stripe down the side. A broad brimmed campaign hat completes the outfit.

Nation's Scout Leaders to Meet in Cleveland, Ohio, May 13 and 14

Their common interest in America's boyhood will bring together at Cleveland, Ohio, May 13 and 14 several hundred business men, educators, public officials, doctors, lawyers and churchmen for the 28th annual National Council meeting of the Boy Scouts of America. The theme chosen for the conclave is "Scouting-for all boys" wherever they are.

Most of the delegates representing the 537 Local Boy Scout Councils that administer the Scout Program in the United States and its possessions are leaders in the life of their home communities. There are two main features of the Boy Scouts' national annual meetings. As the legislative meeting of the National Council, made up of more than 1,800 members who form a true cross-section of American life, they will elect officers, approve new policies and hear annual reports on the many phases and activities of the Boy Scouts. The Cleveland meeting will also be an inspirational gathering. Methods for promoting the Scout Program locally and for advancing the work of Scout Troops will be discussed. The gathering gives opportunities for interchange of ideas and speakers will portray trends in Scouting.

Wheeler McMillen, editorial director of "The County Home" magazine, will speak on the needs of the rural boy and what Scouting offers him. Mr. McMillen is President of the American Association of Agriculture Editors and a recognized authority on national agricultural economics and rural affairs. He is a forceful speaker and progressive leader in farming. He is chairman of the National Committee on Rural Scouting of the Boy Scouts of America.

Margiotti Outlines Legal Steps to Remove Penn State

In a formal opinion requested by Governor Earle, Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti this week ruled that before the name of Pennsylvania State College can be changed, the plan must be approved by a majority of the college board of trustees, by the Court of Common Pleas of Centre County and by the State Council of Education.

Governor Earle has suggested that the name of the college be changed to University of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. The student body also favors the alteration.

Pointing out that State College is subject to the provisions of the Nonprofit Corporation Act in so far as the amending of its charter, and hence its name, is concerned, Margiotti detailed the procedure that must be followed.

Centre County Court Must Act A resolution authorizing the proposed amendment shall be adopted by the affirmative vote of at least a majority of the trustees entitled to vote thereon at a regularly special meeting duly convened after at least ten days' written notice to all members of this purpose.

"This proposed new name is registered with the Department of State. Then the articles of amendment, together with a certificate from the department of State showing the registration of the proposed name, are filed in the Prothonotary's office of Centre County.

"After advertisement, the application is made to the Court of Common Pleas of Centre County for its approval of the change of name. If the Court is satisfied as to the propriety of the amendment, it directs the prothonotary to transmit the amendment to the superintendent of public instruction. This official must, within sixty days after the receipt of the articles, cause the State Council of Education to be convened and
