Memorial Day Birthplace?

The little town of Boalsburg, Centre County, claims the honor of originating the Memorial Day custom of decorating soldlers' graves. Here in 1864, Emma Hunter laid a wreath oa the grave of her father. Dr. Reuben Hunter, Union Army surgeon. Her grand-daughter Emma Eliza Stuart still carries on the family

While Centre county is proud to claim the distinction of having originated the Memorial day custom as it was observed last Monday, it is revealed that other communities covet the honor. Touching upon the anniversary of Memorial Day and the question of its origin, the Williamsport Sun recently published the following bit of history:

It is seventy years since Gen, John A. Logan, as commander-inchief of the Grand Army of the Republic, in his General Order No. 11, asked that May 30 be set aside as a day in memory of the Civil War dead and that flowers be placed upon their graves in token of the honor in which their country held them.

Boalsburg's claim to priority is based upon the action of Emma Hunter in carrying a wreath to the grave of her father, Dr. Reuben Hunter, Union Army surgeon, This was in 1864. Harrisburg counters Boalsburg's claim, asserting that long before the Civil War, it established the community custom of decorating the graves of Mexican War dead. However, it is probable that to Carbondale, a small town in the Southern Illinois Ozarks, in the region known as "Little Egypt," there is to be accorded the honor of having been the first community to observe Carbondale's claim is bolstered by the circumstance that General Logan was a participant in its ceremony and that it was there he received the inspiration which led to his proclamation of an annual day

There is a timely significance to the story of the first Memorial Day "Little Egypt," as Mabel Thompson Rauch tells it, she in turn getting the story from her aunt, Mrs. M. M. Thompson, of Carbondale, who as a girl of 15 had a leading role in the rites which "Little Egypt" of remembrance and to his successful effort to have the day given of-conducted April 5, 1867. With a reunion of remnants of the Grand Army of the Republic and the United Confederate War Veterans to be held at Gettysburg in July, at the seventy-lifth anniversary of the terrible battle fought there differences have arisen over the propriety of permitting the raising of the Confederate flag. These differences, although not generally shared, show that the animosity born of the Civil War is not completely for-

It is, therefore, significant to note that "Little Egypt" planned its day of tribute to the war dead as a means of healing the wounds of "Little Egypt" was part of a northern state, geographically, but in its population and its majority opinion it was southern. It had been settled by southerners. Although they did not keep slaves, they upheld the cause of the South. Consequently, the war found the area divided. Families sent sons into the Union Army and others to join the Confederate forces. Feeling ran high. The end of the war found the region steeped in sorrow, for its losses were heavy. Bitterness filled many hearts.

When Spring came to Carbondale in 1867, someone had the happy thought to bring the people of the community together, to sorrow with one another at the graves of their dead and to heal the wounds of war by expression of mutual sympathy. Young girls were selected to make wreaths and armloads of flowers were carried to the cemetery, there to be placed, without discrimination, on the graves of those who died in the war, whichever the side for which they fought. General Logan was the speaker of the day.

Carbondale found its bitterness appeased. It planned for annual repetition of the observance, finally deciding upon May 30 as a suitable date, because more flowers would then be available and more favorable

When General Logan officially designated May 30 as Memorial Day he called upon the Grand Army and the people to meet "for the purpose of strewing flowers or otherwise decorating the graves of comrades who died in defense of their country during the late rebellion, and whose bodies now lie in every city, village and hamlet churchyard in the

His purpose was that Memorial Day might serve to appease the bitterness born of the war, not to keep it alive. His hope, it is obvious, was to give to the nation that blessed feeling of reconciliation and relief which had come to "Little Egypt" as it carries its flowers to the graves of the Blue and the Gray, without discrimination, without bitterness of Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman departed for a wedding trip to Philadelphia and Atlantic City, and upon their return late this week will reside for the time being at the State College Hotel. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel H. Jack, of Colver, is a graduate of the Indiana State Teachers' College and for the past nine years has been at State College.

McCullough-Nicholson

Miss Janet Nicholson, of Pittsburgh, became Mrs. James Bryant McCullough, of Milesburg and Pittsburgh, at a ceremony Friday night in the Twentieth Century Club, Pittsburgh. The bride wore a gown of pale peach colored frosted organdie made with a sweethear neck.ine and a fitted bodice. Around the neck and short puffed sleeves was accordion pleated organdie, and the same pleating finished the hem of the skirt and the train, which fell from the waistline, Her veil of pale peach tinted net had a simplicity headress, with a few net eaves around the forehead. She carried lilies of the valley with cymbidium orchids, a delicate peach variety. The two attendants, Mrs. William A. Meyer, as matron of honor, and Miss Mary Elizabeth Creighton, wore dresses alike of turquoise blue marquisette with tops of blue lace, long full skirts and square necks. In their hair they wore natural peach-colored African daisies, and their bouquets had the same flowers combined with gladiolas in the same color. Dr. Samuel Harris Johnson III was Mr. McCullough's best man. Mrs. Nicholson wore a gown of cream-colored lace, and a corsage of purple orchids, and Mrs. McCullough's gown was gold lace, and she wore brown orchids. The Reverend Joseph S. Morledge of the Sixth Presbyterian church read the marriage service. The bride, a daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Harry Schuyler Nicholson, of Shady avenue, Pittsburgh, and the bridegroom, a son of Mr. and Mrs. George Blain McCullough, of Milesburg, left for a trip south. They will be at home in Severn street when they return. Present at the wedding were the bridegroom's parents from Milesburg; Mr. and Mrs. Clair Deitrich, of Bellefonte, and Mr. and Mrs. John Floyd Kizer, of Towanda, Pa., and their son, John Floyd
