

Over The County News

The foundation is being laid for a new hog and sheep barn on Grange park. The work is being supervised by A. H. Spayd, who has charge of the park grounds. P. H. Luse, Harry Neff and Kenneth Dultrow are assisting on the job at present.

Paul Foust is back in Millheim after spending some time in Albuquerque, New Mexico. He states that the climate is very healthful. Every day one can expect sunshine. New Mexico has many tuberculosis sanitariums, and Albuquerque itself contains a large population of health seekers. Jack Keifer is still in New Mexico, working at the present time, but expects to return to college later.

The families of Summer Frankenberg, of Millheim, and Paul Vonada, of Aaronsburg, have taken a cottage near CCC camp 8-118, Clearfield county, for the summer. Last Monday the necessary equipment for summer living quarters were taken out to the spot and for the next several months commuting will be unnecessary for Messrs. Frankenberg and Vonada, employees at Camp 8-118.

Duane Simons of Millheim, ranks with the fishermen who have taken large trout from local streams this season. It was late Saturday evening that he hooked what first appeared to be a water-soaked log below the dam at the East Main street bridge. However, after a stiff struggle, he landed a twenty-inch brown beauty, weighing over three pounds. And 'tis said, there is a larger one in that same pool.

J. Ernest Wagner of Centre Hall, son of Clayton Wagner, was elected to teach the fifth and sixth grades in the borough schools, beginning with the fall term in September. The local school board made the selection at its meeting last Thursday evening. Mr. Wagner succeeds Thomas L. Moore, resigned. Mr. Wagner is a graduate of the local high school and of the Teachers College in Lock Haven. He has been a successful school teacher in Potter township for two years past, and taught the Tusseyville school last year.

Three automobiles driven by Centre Hall High school seniors met with an accident as they were on their way to Rolling Green for their class picnic Friday morning. The three cars collided when the first stopped rather suddenly, and the next two were unable to avoid or pass the first car. The first car, driven by Robert Frazier, sustained the least damage; the third car, driven by Jack Kirkpatrick, was damaged to the extent of $180. In the second car, Agnes Neff sustained a bad cut on the right side of her head, and was taken to the hospital at Danville. The second car, driven by John Dashen, was quite badly damaged, but not to the extent of the third one.

"WHAT'S THE MISSUS SO HAPPY ABOUT?"

Jennie Kerr, "The Effie Deans" of the Barrens

would reconsider and return. "When she died some time after her lover's marriage she had asked to be buried in the bridal dress she had made unknown to the ironmaster and looked so lovely in death no one could believe but that she was sleeping.

"There was another dark girl, Jennie Kerr, known throughout Centre county as "The Effie Deans of the Barrens," who also died unmarried, taking her original beauty with her to the unappreciative grave. Jennie's family were not very energetic and some of them ailing, so it became a very more difficult to properly bury her in the two hundred acre farm on the edge of the barrens. Some of the young men of the neighborhood suggested that the crops be planted and cultivated, hay and grain cut and other seasonal work done by midnight frolics. The farm boys of the barrens would march to Jennie's home, two by two, singing loudly and by the light of the moon, performed the farm work. It is said that every lad who helped was in love with the bewitching girl and she could not make a choice she died a maid" to use the mountain vernacular is about the words.

"A very affecting sermon was preached by Rev. George Smick, Rev. Moser's predecessor. Probably there is no more beautiful church in Central Pennsylvania than this old Lutheran church, at Gatesburg, with its tall graceful spire. Built on land donated by Mr. Colemire, plans are already under way for an elaborate rededication ceremony on "The three score and ten anniversary" in 1939. Rev. Daniel Moser's pastorate extended over a period of 30 years to 1892.

"When about 1890 the Bessemer process revolutionized the iron and steel industry, the Scotia Mining and Iron works began to retrench and finally closed up. About the turn of the century many of the stockholders helped organize the U. S. Steel corporation in 1901. Some of the old buildings were pulled down, others burned, but a few including Andy Carnegie's "bachelor hall" still remain where sometimes old folks already under way for an elaborate rededication ceremony on "The three score and ten anniversary" in 1939. Rev. Daniel Moser's pastorate extended over a period of 30 years to 1892.

"According to some the name "Barrens" is taken from the name of a family named Barron, who owned much of this Ferguson town. The region immediately after the Revolution. The same is the case with the "Bar" meadows, of Centre county, which are in no sense "bare" and are said to be taken from a pioneer hunter named Baer or Baer, originally from Lancaster county.

"Right after the World war a syndicate bought up most of the land in the "barrens" and planned to sell it to the state for a national guard encampment, in conjunction with the officers club, at Bellefonte. As it was held to be too remote a spot, in case of emergency, and too far from Harrisburg, wiser counsel prevailed and Indianopolis Gap became the main headquarters of the Pennsylvania militia, and once more the Barrens returned to its shadows and its ghosts.

Little Girl Loses Leg Under Train

demonstration of the fortitude of the girl.

It was the saddest case witnessed in many years, hospital attendants said. The child, terrified by the sharp pain in her leg as she lay under the wheels of the train, and then confused by all the excitement which followed the accident, did not know her leg was off.

"My name is Herron," she said, and spelled it for attendants while doctors worked to stem the flow of blood.

Several times she complained that she could not "get her leg down," and the sturdiest of the attendants winced.

Ether Herron's case struck a pitiful note among old and young, as news of the accident spread through Williamsport. Hospital telephones rang incessantly. Men and women called from Harrisburg, asking if their bicycles, which they might be privileged to volunteer blood.

At least 40 volunteers contacted the hospital within three hours after the accident occurred in response to broadcast.

But the first volunteer was the girl's father, Robert Herron, who dazed by the tragedy into which his family suddenly was thrust, stood outside the child's hospital room, rubbing his forehead as if to clear away a bad dream.

Charlie Cushion advises that the original sit-down strike was staged by in-laws when they visited him.

Hillary Veard Seeks Commutation of Sentence

Hillary James Veard, of Phillipsburg, sentenced by former Judge M. Ward Fleming on February 24, 1932, to serve from 5 to 10 years in the Western Penitentiary on a charge of breaking, entering and larceny, is seeking commutation of sentence.

In his application Veard claims he has been in poor health since a recent operation for gallstones, and adds that if released from prison he will reside with a daughter in West Virginia. He is 40 years old and his minimum sentence expires February 24, 1939.

Veard, who had a record of three previous arrests, pleaded guilty to two charges of breaking, entering and larceny in February 1932. From a freight car he obtained loot valued at $50, and from a vacant house he took canned goods valued at $10.

Several other men were implicated in the robberies.

His own idea is that if there is a revolt in Mexico, the munitions will come from foreign countries.

Akron, Ohio, Centre Counties to Meet

The fourth annual picnic and reunion of the East Penna Valley Association of Akron, Ohio, and vicinity will be held Sunday afternoon and evening, June 26th, at Crystal Lake, about seven miles west of Akron, a short distance north of Route 18.

A cordial invitation is extended by the officers, Henry E. Mingle, president, and Roy H. Musser, secretary, to all former residents of East Penna Valley to attend. A short address will be given by one of the younger members of the association.

Wendell Bowers Travels 'Last Mile'

Two hours later he was routed out for his last cross-country trip.

With the cold-blooded murder of Mrs. Carpenter, attractive 39-year-old divorcee, at the bridge near Harrisburg, Bowers reached the apex of a warped career.

He left Huntingdon Reformatory by that route December 3 last, only 10 days before he broke into Mrs. Carpenter's handsome home on Dreschertown road, Camp Hill.

Throughout the afternoon he prowled through the empty house, drinking whisky and reading cheap magazines. At 4:40 p. m. when Mrs. Carpenter and Miss Griffin returned from their beauty shop at Germantown and Chelten avenues, he met them with Mrs. Carpenter's own gun.

After robbing them, the shifty-eyed Bowers forced them into an upstairs bedroom, ordered Mrs. Carpenter to tie up her young friend and struck Miss Griffin with the pistol. Then he shot and killed Mrs. Carpenter.

After attempting to attack Miss Griffin, who begged his mercy, he turned on her and shot her in the head. She was killed before he was arrested at the age of 19, made her watch him bathe in the adjoining bathroom.

With a masacred change from savagery to gentility, he next led her into the bathroom and bathed her head with her perfume—and left on the floor, the fingerprint that was one of the strongest links in the evidence that convicted him.

Photograph Identified
Then he fled. He thumbed a ride to the Camp Hill station on the Reading Railroad, went to Philadelphia, moved on to Pittsburgh, Chicago and finally to Louisville, Ky., where a week after the crime he was arrested as a vagrant under an alias.

Meanwhile, Miss Griffin, dazed, shuffled slowly through a batch of rogue's gallery pictures brought to her hospital bed. With a terrified scream she identified one of Bowers. That and the fingerprint broke the case. While the chase was still on a Federal Bureau of Investigation expert in Washington spotted the fingerprint.

Grinning, Bowers confessed and in a Montgomery county court pleaded guilty. In the county prison at Norrisstown he read, smoked and ran his weight from 135 pounds up to 150.

Father Claims Body
Scheduled to die May 8, he received a reprieve May 8 from Governor Earle. The Board of Pardons, after studying a petition signed by hundreds of county residents, denied clemency. That left the young killer just where he was—except for the planting of a paradoxically hardy seed of hope.

John H. Bowers, Amherst undertaker, had been instructed by Roland Bowers, the youth's father, to claim the body Monday. Bowers' mother has been dead many years.

Bowers served time in the Janesburg (N. J.) Home for Boys, at Glen Mills and at Huntingdon Reformatory for burglary. Each time he was freed by parole.

63 Herds of Cattle In County Tested In May

Department Staff Visits Penn State

Staff members of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture visited the agricultural experiment station at the Pennsylvania State College Thursday. Last fall station research workers made a similar visit to Harrisburg.

At Penn State the department staff members heard short talks on the program of the School of Agriculture in instruction, research and extension. They inspected the respiration calorimeter, only apparatus of its kind in the world; the vitamin laboratory, the milk cooling laboratory, the mushroom house where synthetic composts are being tested; the Dairy Building, which houses important experiments in dairy products; the dairy barn, with its herd of five leading breeds; the beef cattle barn, the experimental greenhouse, where tests on potato breeding, nutrition of the rose and vegetable breeding are conducted; the 56-year-old Jordan soil fertility plots, and the poultry plant, which houses experiments on chickens, turkeys and ring-necked pheasants.

Trips were taken over the College farms, with stops at the orchards, the soil erosion experiment station, and the Spring Creek livestock farms.

Visits to the 13 departments of the School of Agriculture concluded the day's activities.

Could A Man Swim In Lake of Gasoline

The question "Can a man swim in gasoline?" is answered in a recent study made by the American Petroleum Institute. Rockefeller Center, N. Y., shows that, since the buoyancy of gasoline is about a fifth less than water, a person could not swim in it unless he could swim in water with a weight of about 40 pounds on his back. The average person therefore couldn't keep afloat in gasoline.

The situation is something like flying in the air. A gas-filled balloon is lighter than air and floats. The human body is heavier than water and floats in it. But in gasoline the human body would be heavier than the fluid. A heavier than air machine can fly because of the rapid speed of the propellers. A man swimming in gasoline would have to exert tremendous effort to keep afloat. He could not swim for any length of time.

Strip Cropping Helps Prevent Soil Losses

Recent heavy rains in some sections have caused serious losses through washing or erosion on long or steep slopes in corn, potatoes, oats or vegetables, according to County Agent R. C. Blaney. He also reports that farmers have saved their land from soil loss where they have divided their fields on contour lines, into alternate strips of cultivated and close growing crops.

One experienced farmer's report is that he "didn't lose a hill of corn" on his strip-cropped fields, but that most of his neighbors are busy replanting corn where the water followed the planter marks down the hill on unprotected slopes. He is strip cropping for the first time and quoted his hired hand as saying, after plowing his first furrows on the contour, "I hope we don't have to plow up and down these hills again. It's so much easier to farm on the level around the hill."

On another farm, oats, vegetables and alfalfa were found growing above a field of corn on a slope. Each row of corn was seriously damaged below the vegetables and about half the rows below the oats, but no signs of washing were observed below the alfalfa. Alfalfa has held back and absorbed the rainfall to such an extent that little or no water from above came down on the corn.

Occasional losses of soil after heavy rains will seriously damage land through removal of the soil and with it plant food, lime, and organic matter. Building up soil in productivity is a tedious and expensive task when compared to the low cost of revising farm practices to save the soil by strip cropping or diversion ditches.

Farmers interested in making plans to prevent future costly soil loss on their farms can obtain valuable suggestions and assistance from the Agricultural Extension Association Office in Bellefonte.

OLD FAIR GROUNDS BRIDGE IN DEPLORABLE CONDITION

The floor of the iron bridge spanning Spring Creek at the upper end of the fair grounds, just north of Bellefonte, is in deplorable condition, and whoever is responsible for its upkeep might soon find themselves defendants in a damage suit.

The board flooring is badly worn and chipped. At one place a section of floor about two feet long and six or seven inches wide has dropped out, endangering pedestrians crossing the structure. The hole is a perfect set-up for a broken leg, if not more serious injuries.
