THE MERCANTILE LIST

In my work as Mercantile Appraiser, I found that some people were absent from home when I called at their place, and business, others had not made up their mind to go, but promised to do so and send it in to me. Others who just started in business, had to be given a month's time to permit us to calculate the business for the year, therefore the list as printed is not altogether complete for these reasons, although a goodly number of persons have sent in their reports since compiling my record and therefore were too late to be listed. Numerous returns I sent out and were returned to me unclaimed and others because of persons quitting business, the last item being the most common. Every effort is being made to secure the listing of everyone subject to a tax, and we invite any information that may be given us to help make this canvass a thorough one. HERBERT H. STOVER, Mercantile Appraiser. An expert politician can change the issue before the average voter knows what the question is.

TELEVISION PLANNED FOR VISITORS TO NEW YORK

Television, long awaited by the American public, soon will function for visitors to the NBC studios in Rockefeller Center. A television exhibit will augment the guided tours through the studios and the other Rockefeller Center attractions which in the past four years have attracted more than 3,000,000 tourists. The exhibit covering all phases of the new art, will be opened late this summer.

Preparations for the first move to bring television to the general public include special training for the guides who will escort visitors on the tours. These men have all been detailed to a special school, and when they emerge, they will be thoroughly grounded in information about television. Three studios have been set aside for the benefit of the public. The first will house the Icoscopic camera, a "boom" microphone and other equipment for broadcasting sight as well as sound. In the second studio visitors will be able to see performers both on the screens and in the real life. The third room will be the first television museum. Here will be displayed apparatus from its earliest, crude beginnings to its present state.

U. S. HOME ECONOMICS WORKERS IN CONFERENCE

Members of the Pennsylvania home economics extension service will be hosts at the annual pre-convention conference for extension workers at Bedford June 24 to 27. About 250 home economics extension workers from all parts of the United States, are expected to attend the conference, which precedes the 31st annual meeting of the American Home Economics Association in Pittsburgh June 28 to July 1. The three-day program includes group meetings for county workers, for specialists in clothing, in foods and nutrition, in home management and home furnishings, and for supervisors. Trips are arranged to historic points of interest and special entertainment is planned for each evening. C. William Duncan, Philadelphia newspaper columnist, will speak on Saturday evening.

Drying Clothes

Sunshine is much more desirable in drying clothes than a high wind, since sunshine both sweetens and bleaches them, while a high wind may tear the clothes and will take the stiffness out of starched goods. There are people in every state who go fishing to wet their whiskies instead of their fishing lines.

Resentence Convict Who Flew Prison

sentenced in Blair County to serve three terms of from 1 to 2 years each, to run consecutively, making a total of from 3 to 6 years. In 1922 he escaped from Rockview, was apprehended, and was brought before the then Judge M. Ward Fleming for sentencing. Judge Fleming lumped McGinnis' three sentences together and sent him to prison for from 3 to 6 years for escaping.

McGinnis later instituted proceedings which found their way into the Supreme Court. He contended that his sentence was unjust, in view of the fact that he was serving but one of the 1-to-2 year sentence at the time of his escape. The Supreme Court upheld McGinnis' contention and in an order directed that the prisoner be returned to Centre County to be resentenced. That's how he became the first man to get less than the doubling of his total sentence, for leaving Rockview before his time was up.

On June 25, 1927, the State legislature passed an act setting forth that when two or more sentences run consecutively, the aggregate time shall be considered as the sentence. In other words, had McGinnis escaped after the passage of the new law last year, the penalty handed down by Judge Fleming would have been correct.

It is reported that there are a number of other Rockview fugitives now serving time for escapes committed before the new law went into effect and that there is a probability that many of them were sentenced upon the total of several consecutive sentences, which would entitle them to resentencing under the terms of the Supreme Court's decision.
