PROTECT QUALITY BY KEEPING EGGS COOL. Egg quality is vitally affected by the care given the eggs when they are laid.

County Agent R. C. Blaney recommends an egg room so constructed that it will maintain a temperature below 68 degrees Fahrenheit and as near 90 per cent relative humidity as possible.

High humidity can be maintained by sprinkling water on the floor, hanging up wet bags, or having water drip down the wall from a pipe suspended along the wall near the ceiling. Just enough water should come from the pipe to keep the wall moist.

An electric fan directed toward the moist wall will aid in the circulation of air in the room, and will hasten cooling of the eggs.

Racks of 2-by-4-inch or 2-by-6-inch material are essential to keep both the empty and filled cases off the floor.

SWARMING BEES CAN BE RETURNED TO OLD HOME. When bees give in to the warlike and fly away as a swarm, they may be captured and returned to the old hive. They will not stay, unless the beekeeper makes certain changes immediately.

County Agent R. C. Blaney says that all queen cells must be destroyed, and four sheets of foundation should be placed in the center of the hive. One-inch blocks should be placed between the hive body and the bottom board at each corner.

The colony also requires plenty of super space. Another way to handle the swarm is to put in a super above a weak colony. Place a sheet of newspaper above the weak colony, and as soon as the bees are in the new hive, remove it from the bottom board and place it on the newspaper, with the lid on top. Place shade boards on top and provide ventilation with two pieces of section. These are put above the newspaper to help prevent suffocation of bees.

PLAN GOLDEN JUBILEE OF C. E. AT HERSHEY. In less than two weeks at least three thousand Christian Endeavors from all parts of Pennsylvania will gather at Hershey for a Golden Jubilee convention, from July 11 to 16.

This gathering provides six restful days of instruction, reverence and worship. The conference leaders, Bible teachers and evening speakers are among the best in the country. These speakers will be present at the evening mass meetings: Dr. Will H. Houghton, president, Moody Bible Institute; Rev. Charles St. John, superintendent, Bowers Mission, New York City; Mrs. Francis E. Clark, co-founder of C. E.; Dr. Harry Rimmer, First Presbyterian church, Duluth, Minn.; and Dr. Harold Paul Sloan, editor, Christian Advocate, New York City.

In addition there are many others who have leading parts in the program. A camping trip has been planned to cut expenses of delegates to $5.00 or under, per person. Approximately seventy-five Endeavors from six counties, mostly from Centre county, will live in tents together, will prepare their own meals, manage their own camp life, and enjoy Christian fellowship. Persons wishing to attend are instructed to send registrations immediately to Thomas B. Musser, Rebersburg, Pa. Free camp ground has been secured and anyone possessing tents and cooking utensils, and willing to loan them, should let Kenneth Walker (State College R. D., or dial 3718) know as soon as possible.

12 Sentenced At Special Session Here

group of three who last August robbed a service station attendant near Marha at the point of revolver.

Meyer was the first to be brought before the bar of justice. He entered a plea of guilty to charges of cashing a forged check at the G. C. Murphy Co., 5 to 10c store, Bellefonte, June 17. The prosecutor in the case was C. C. Brown, manager of the store, who declared that Meyer ordered a check for $30 drawn to the order of Mike Cadwalader, and signed by "W. E. Ripka." Brown said the store had cashed Ripka's checks before, and had no difficulty with them. He notified Bellefonte police when the First National Bank on which the check was drawn, declared Ripka's signature to be a forgery. Meyer was arrested a few hours later.

The defendant told the Court in substance that he was the innocent stooge of Emel and Poorman. They persuaded him to go to the postoffice, he said, and there they led him to write the check, forge the names and finally cash the paper just as surely as though they were pulling the strings of Charlie McCarthy. After receiving the money, the three divided the spoils, $10 going to each, he concluded. Meyer admitted having been in trouble with the law "six or seven times" before.

On each of two counts, one for issuing, and the other for passing a forged check, Meyer was sentenced to pay the costs of prosecution, a fine of $1, make restitution of the money fraudulently obtained, and undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary, Pittsburgh, for from 1 to 2 years. The prison terms run concurrently, however.

Jesse Emel and Blondie Poorman entered pleas of guilty to attempting to pass a forged check for $30, drawn to the order of Joe C. Loren, and signed by W. E. Ripka, at the Bostor Brothers Shoe store here. The prosecutor, Borough Police Officer Donald Johnson, related that he arrested Emel after he had been informed by the store management that he had attempted to pass a worthless check.

The manager, suspicious when Emel tried to cash the check, told him to wait in the store a moment. Meanwhile the check was found to be a forgery, but when the manager returned to the store Emel was gone. He was arrested an hour or so later. Admitting his guilt, Emel implicated Poorman, who was taken into custody the same afternoon by Chief of Police Dukeman.

Poorman admitted a previous police record, while Emel declared he once served time for aggravated assault and battery. Each of the two men was sentenced to pay the costs, a fine of $1, and to serve from 1 to 2 years in the penitentiary.

The three men were arrested at Coudersport last week by members of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and State Motor Police officers, in connection with the transportation of a stolen car across state lines. Under questioning the three admitted the garage auto robbery and were returned here for prosecution.

Officers asked that Watson be shown leniency in view of the fact that he was led by the other two, and because he did not accompany them into the station. Miltarber and Haskins being the two who entered the building with drawn guns. While Watson was taken into custody any previous criminal record, Judge Walker declared that the Court had little chance to extend leniency because of the seriousness of their crime, which is a felony ranking next in seriousness to murder. Miltarber was sentenced to pay a fine of $1, the costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for from 2 to 4 years. Watson and Haskins each were sentenced to serve indeterminate sentences in the Pennsylvania Industrial School at Huntingdon.

Three members of the Poe Valley CCC camp, who entered pleas of guilty to breaking into a hunting camp and stealing articles valued at $13, were placed under probation for three years in view of the fact that it was a first offense for two of them, and because all of them were honorably discharged from the CCC organization for their offense.

The trio were: Charley Meek, 19 and Dally Keith, 20, of Sandy Ridge, and Donald Brandt, 16, of Coburn. According to Officer J. E. Kane, of the State Motor Police at Lewisston, the three youths on June 14 broke into a cottage in Potter township owned by Carl Z. Monie, taking a Swiss revolver, a gold-plated safety razor, some candies and some cakes. All the items, with the exception of the cakes, were recovered in the boys' lockers in the CCC Camp, Officer Kane said. They had eaten the cakes.

Keith was the only one of the three who had been in court before, having served a jail term for disorderly conduct and all term for arrested for a violation of the vehicle code.

Andy Granite, aged 19, of Clarence, was sentenced to pay a fine of $1, the costs of prosecution and to undergo imprisonment in the county jail for 60 days when he entered a plea of guilty to breaking, entering and larceny.

State Motor Police officer Marshall Kimbeck, of Rockview barracks, the prosecutor in the case, stated that Granite's name is on the county barnyard Hunting Camp in Burnside township, May 19, after breaking the lock on the front door by shooting at it with a 22 caliber revolver. Kimbeck said the loot consisted of a first aid box and some hand soap, although members of the camp said Granite possessed tents and cooking utensils, and willing to loan them, should let Kenneth Walker (State College R. D., or dial 3718) know as soon as possible.

EMPLOYED IN COAL MINES IN THE CLARENCE AREA. GROWS FAT IN JAIL.

David McKean, proprietor of a pool room at Phillipsburg, who is serving a three months' jail term on charges of operating gambling devices, applied for a parole from jail. His attorney said one of the reasons McKean wants out is because the man is growing fat in jail and that an additional weight is proving detrimental to his health.

McKean began his sentence April 25 when he pleaded guilty to operating slot machines and punch boards in his place of business. It was his second offense for the same crime in a short period of time. Monday in Court McKean's attorney said his business is suffering heavily because of his inability to supervise it personally; that his mother is in ill health, and that McKean has been putting on weight so rapidly in jail that his health is impaired.

Judge Walker yesterday granted the parole.

CCC Camp Youth Held in Theft

18. State Motor Police were immediately notified, and a report was sent out over the teletype. Owing to the characteristic appearance of CCC trucks, officers expected to encounter little difficulty in recovering the machine.

More than a week passed with no word being received of the truck. Monday of this week Corporal Shaw received a tip that a CCC truck was parked in a woods near Colyer, and after conducting a brief investigation, Shaw learned that Taylor had spent the weekend of the 18th, at his parental home near Colyer. Going to the Camp, the officer questioned Taylor for a time with no success, but the youth finally admitted his guilt.

He said he had taken the truck to drive to his home for the weekend, and that when he discovered the machine's gasoline tank was nearly empty, he hid it in the woods. The machine was not damaged but the fuel tank was empty.

Camp officials reported that Taylor had no right to drive the truck at any time. He is said to have had one previous encounter with the law.

operation of local industries and individuals, extends an invitation for every Centre countian to be present for the evening's program. Everything is free, and the 3,000 seats available on the grounds will go to those who arrive early.

The program will begin at 7:30 o'clock when the Webster band of Millersburg will play an hour's concert. The band is contributing its services for the occasion. The fireworks display will begin promptly at 8:30 p. m. when John J. Bower, Chief Fire Marshall of Bellefonte, aided by a staff of ten men each from the Logan and Undine Fire Companies, will begin firing the displays from the western end of the field, which will be roped off to prevent spectators from getting too close.

The display is expected to last more than an hour, with several pieces in operation continuously. It is expected to be the largest and most complete display of fireworks ever shown in Bellefonte.

Firms and individuals who contributed to the fund for the purchase of the fireworks are as follows: American Legion, Baseball team, Athletic Association, City Bakery and employes, C. Y. Wagner and Co., First National Bank, West Penn Power Co., Court House employes, Elks American Lions and Stone Co. Clusters, Bellefonte Trust Co., Federal Match Co., Farmers National Bank, Sutton Engineering Co., Kewanee Club, L. O. O. M., White Rock Quarries, Kofmans, W. W. Sieg and the Chamber of Commerce.

CONTROL INROADS OF CABBAGE WORMS

Cabbage worms are working on heads of cabbage that have begun to form, according to reports which County Agent R. C. Blaney has been receiving from Centre county farmers.

He calls the attention of cabbage growers to the advisability of spraying or dusting their plants to control the insects. Arsenate of lead is the most efficient arsenical insecticide. As a dust, it should be used at the rate of 25 pounds with 75 pounds of hydrated lime. For use as a spray, mix 8 to 10 pounds of lead arsenate with 100 gallons of water.

A spreading agent is necessary with the spray. Milk powder or one of the other spreaders available on the market may be used. Soap is also a valuable spreader.

County Agent warns that arsenical poisons may be unsafe for use on plants where the caterpillars are not trimmed from the head later. In such cases, a dust containing one-half to three-fourths per cent rotenone will be effective if applied at the rate of 25 to 30 pounds per acre. It may be applied either with a power or hand duster, depending upon the size of the planting. It is particularly advisable to use rotenone for the control of cabbage leaf worms on loose leaf cabbage varieties where the danger of arsenical residue on the plants must be avoided.

FOREST FIRE TOWERS AT STRATEGIC POINTS

Every minute saved in "spotting" the start of a forest fire means a saving of time, money, and timber. Just a few minutes may mean the difference between a blaze that can be checked by a single man or small crew and a big fire that will call for an emergency force. So the United States Forest Service is always trying to place its lookout towers in spots where the observers can get the quickest possible glimpse of rising pillars of smoke.

Lookouts never observe conditions that affect smoke visibility. Distance is one; a small fire close by is as visible as a larger one at a distance. Background is another; the deep green of an evergreen forest usually offers clear contrast to a smoke column which might be almost invisible against bare earth or rock or the soft brown of a drying range area. The angle of the sun is important. It is easier to see smoke when the sun is "against" the observer and has the best chance to see fires to the east and south, and in afternoon to the south and west.

Early morning fires sometimes escape detection for many minutes because of an "inversion" layer of cool dense air that lies 20 or 30 feet above ground level. When smoke from a small fire reaches this layer it mushrooms out to the sides instead of rising, and a fire may make considerable progress before smoke breaks through.

Quick-spreading fires are visible promptly, but this is a kind of aid to quick reporting that the fire fighters do not favor. That kind of fire is likely to continue spreading fast all the time that a crew is on the way to start suppression.

FOWL BRAWL. Five disturbers of the peace at Staunton, Va., won't give a hoot any more. Policemen E. L. Bragg and E. B. Turner, called by residents who said the neighborhood was so noisy they couldn't sleep, ended the disturbance by shooting five owls in thirty minutes.
